BRIEF MENTION.

Leaves From the Notebook of Chronicle Reporters.

Seed Rye, 75 cents per bushel, at Joles, Collins & Co.'s

Five horses have been entered for the gentleman's roadster race, and it promises to be a good one.

The weather predictions for today were showers followed by fair, and for tomorrow fair with probable frost.

W. E. Taylor arrived from Salem last night bringing his trotting horse Montana which he will enter for the races here.

The Dalles has quite a literary appearance today, nearly everyone you meet having a book under his arm. The reading matter is well selected and comes high. It is also collection day.

The No Treadle sewing machine made expressly for ladies who are not able to run a treadle machine, can be seen at The Dalles fair. See it before you buy, or address P. W. Brigham, 116 Court street, The Dalles, Or.

John Roth has sold his trotter John L. to Mike Welch. John L. is a half brother of Anita, and will yet be heard from. Mr. Welch is a thorough horseman, and will bring him to the front soon. The price paid we understand, was $800.

The ladies of the M. E. church will serve meals during the fair in the building east of the First National bank, formerly occupied by Mrs. LeBallister. Lunch will be served from 12 to 2 o'clock and dinner from 7 to 8. All meals 25 cents each.

One victim of misplaced confidence this morning called on the city recorder who assessed him five dollars. Chronic impecuniosity compelled him to accept a position on the staff of Street Commissioner Butts, until his services are considered equivalent to the amount of the fine.

Madame L. Dulac, 382 Morrison street, Portland, Or., artistic French dress maker, late of H. B. Litt, is ready to make appointments with the ladies who would like to have her come to The Dalles, to take their order, to fit them there. Latest styles and fit guaranteed. Reasonable prices. iw.

James B. Crossen has opened a neat little grocery store in the Masonic building, and has everything imaginable in the line of eatables. His smiling face looms up amid the other good things, but easily distinguishable from the other stock because it has whiskers on it.

The trestle across Mill creek has been planked and a substantial railing is in place. The O. R. & N. have also built a sidewalk and railing from the track south to Mrs. Wilson's building on Union street. We are glad to note that the trestle is again in safe condition, for badly as we need items we do not feel like getting them at the expense of someone's life or limbs, and before it was fixed it was certainly an item breeder.

Don't forget that the fair commences one week from today, and at the same time make up your mind to encourage and build it up by bringing in your produce and stock, and if you have none by giving it the benefit of your presence. By following this plan for a year or two the local fair can be made something to be looked forward to and appreciated. Besides when outsiders find that you have something for them to see they will come to see it. Try this plan once and note the result.

The Press Association.

The Oregon journalists to the number of thirty-six passed through on the 11 o'clock passenger bound for Pendleton. Many of them were accompanied by their wives or daughters, so that the total number was about fifty. Among them was Miss May Fuller of Tacoma, the lady who made the ascent of Mt. Ranier, and who is one of the leading shepherdesses of the Mazamas. The session opened at 2 o'clock today, and the following programme has been arranged:

Tuesday—Concert in the evening under the auspices of the ladies of Trinity church at Frazer opera-house. Hon. J. N. Dolph will deliver an address on the questions of the day. Miss Fay Fuller, of Tacoma, will read a paper on "Woman's work in the Field of Journalism," and Mr. C. J. Curtis, of Astoria, will respond to the address of welcome.

Wednesday—in the afternoon a trip to the fruit country at Milton; in the evening public addresses at Frazer opera-house and banquet at Hotel Pendleton.

Thursday—A portion of the day will be spent in visiting places of interest in Pendleton, and in the evening a ball will be given at Frazer opera-house.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

From our regular correspondent.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 28, 1894.

At every roundup of the information received by Chairman Babcock, of the republican congressional campaign committee, the indications point to a larger republican majority in the next house. According to the latest figures made by Chairman Babcock the next house will be composed of 200 republicans, 147 democrats and 9 populists, and 28 of the state delegations will be controlled by republicans. These figures are considered by those who are familiar with the information upon which they are based to be very conservative, only those districts being put down in the republican column which appear to be reasonably certain to go republican. For instance, the republicans only claim eleven members from Illinois, where many well-informed persons believe they will elect a larger number; and where the democratic committee, in a published estimate, concedes the election of thirteen republicans. It is just the same with New York, Mr. Babcock only claims nineteen, while New Yorkers who come to Washington say that at least twenty-two and possibly twenty-four republicans will be sent to the next house.

Considerable amusement was caused in Washington by the attempt of democrats to appear surprised at Senator Hill's nomination for governor of New York by the democratic convention, when they knew perfectly well that the whole programme was cut and dried from the day that Hill and Murphy compelled Flower to withdraw as a candidate. Hill has recognized for some time that this campaign was a life and death struggle with him, with the chances in favor of death. "But he concluded," says one of his close friends, "that he preferred making the run for governor himself and taking the chances of being supported by the Cleveland democrats, to allowing a Cleveland man to be nominated and then be held responsible for his defeat, by democrats outside of New York. He fully realizes the desperate condition the democratic party of New York is in, but does not believe that it will hurt him politically to be defeated; while he knows that it would make him the biggest man in the democratic party should he by some hook or crook succeed in being elected governor." Lockwood was put on the ticket to catch the Cleveland democrats, but if those in New York are not easier to be caught than those in Washington the catch will be small. Mr. Cleveland has before now proven himself to be no better than the average man when it comes to dealing with his personal enemies, and he would have to be very much better if he really wished to see Dave Hill elected governor of New York at this time. The belief that Levi P. Morton will be the next governor of New York has grown stronger, if possible, since Hill was nominated by the democrats, and it isn't confined to republicans, either.

By its notice that the reciprocity treaty with the United States would cease to be operative on January 1, 1895, Brazil puts on record its disapproval of the democratic idea of abrogating treaties, regardless of their stipulations, by act of congress. It was provided in this treaty that it might be abrogated by either government provided a notice to that effect were served upon the other three months prior to the first of January or the first of July of any year. Notwithstanding that the democrats in congress by a provision in the tariff bill abrogated all reciprocity treaties, except that with Hawaii, without an hour's notice. It was a clever bit of diplomacy on the part of Brazil to decline taking any official notice of the abrogation of the treaty by congress, and instead to give notice of its own intention to abrogate it in accordance with its terms, although to do it American goods shipped to Brazil will have to be admitted under the reciprocity treaty until January 1, 1895, while Brazilian shipments to the U. S. have been deprived of reciprocity advantages since Aug 28, last.

Don Dickenson has landed another fat office by the appointment of Gen. W. W. Duffield, of Detroit, Superintendent of the U. S. Coast and Geodetic Survey to succeed Dr. T. C. Mendenhall, who has been connected with the survey for many years, and whose resignation was recently asked for. General Duffield is a very nice gentleman and one of the few democrats who can truthfully boast of a brilliant war record upon the Union side, but it is because he was Don Dickenson's man that he gets this $6,000 a year plum, and not because of his war record, nor yet because of his possessing the necessary scientific qualifications to successfully administer the duties of the position. #### The O. R. & N. Wage Schedule Case.

This afternoon in the petit jury-room, third floor of the federal court building, commenced the taking of testimony of the employees of the O. R. & N. Co., relative to the wage schedule promulgated by Receiver McNeil. The corridors of the building were crowded by railway men all the forenoon, the impression having gained ground that the taking of testimony would commence in the morning.

It was 1:30 o'clock, however, before any move was made. At that hour a large number of chairs were taken to the jury-room, and soon even standing room was at a premium. Miss Fleming, official stenographer, was on hand with a large stock of paper, and the employees of the company were represented by Attorney John M. Gearin. Attorneys Cox and Cotton appeared for Receiver McNeil.

The taking of testimony will occupy several days, and after the shorthand notes are extended the proceedings will be placed before Judge Bellinger for review.

The object of these proceedings is to secure, if possible, an order from the court more favorable to the employees of the O. R. & N. Co., regarding Receiver McNeil's wage schedule. Judge Caldwell, of the United States circuit court at Omaha, it will be remembered, held that the receiver had no right to change the wage schedule in effect at the time of his appointment without an order of the court. Judge Bellinger, on the other hand, held that the receiver being the managing power of the company, and not the court, had this prerogative.

It is by making a proper showing that the employees now seek to have the court here adhere to the opinion of Judge Caldwell.

"I would rather trust that medicine than any doctor I know of," says Mrs. Hattie Mason of Chilton, Carter county, Mo., in speaking of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. For sale by Blakeley & Houghton, druggists.
