AN EARLY IRONCLAD. It Was Built to Break Through the Spanish Lines. The idea of protected ships, such as the modern men-of-war, is by no means an absolutely new one. This is proved, says the Western Mail, of Cardiff, by the fact that an armored vessel was constructed, though crudely, of course, as far back as 1585 by a shipwright of Antwerp during the wars between the Spaniards and the Dutch. In the summer of 1585 Antwerp was invaded by the Spaniards both by land and water, and the people of Antwerp built the first protected ship on record in an at-tempt to break through the line of be-siegers in the river. It was a craft of unusual size, with flat bottom, its sides armed with iron plates fastened into great beams of wood. When finished the builders thought it a floating castle, impregnable to the artillery and missiles of those days, which should crush all opposition, as it contained a great number of men, some of whom were placed like sharpshooters in the tops of the masts, and the rest protected by the bulwarks.

They were so confident that the craft would rout the enemy that they called it "Finis Belli," thinking it no doubt would put an end to the war. Unfor-Cor. Second and Union Sts. tunately, however, the early ironclad proved a disastrous failure, getting stuck upon a bank of the Scheldt after a very short and unhappy career. The Spaniards were greatly amused with the untimely end of the vessel, while the brave burghers of Antwerp changed the name from "Finis Belli" to "Per-The crew then deserted the Away." ship, and the Spaniards, after defeating the Netherlanders in a naval bat-There is more Catarrh in this section tle, carried the monster in triumph to it became one of the sights of the times. The city of Antwerp was taken August 17, 1585, and so the first ironclad on record came to an unfortunate

CROWN PRINCES PRESENT.

Those of England. Russis and Austria Dancing at the Same Ball. It is not often that the heirs to three of the world's most powerful empires are dancing at the same ball, so a quadrille d'honneur at Buckingham palace the other night was a memorable occasion, says London Figaro. The prince of Wales and crown princes of Russia and Austria were footing it together, and subsequently the Austrian archduke and the czarowitz were noticed waltzing with their backs almost touching each other. The heir of the czar is very fond of dancing, a taste which is shared to the full by his betrothed, Princess Alix of Hesse. The Austrian prince is inclined to be awkward, and managed to entangle his spur with disastrous consequence to the gown of Princess Louise of Battenberg. He is described as a taciturn young man and rather inclined to be morose. During his visit to England he avoided all the society he could and Discovery know its value, and those who really only went to court because he could not very well stay away. JAP WOMAN TOOK COREA.

Empress Jingu Conquered the Country and Wop Everiasting Renown. It is to a woman that Japan owes her claim to Corea and to the naval supremacy of the eastern world. The first naval expedition which made Japan's "arms to shine beyond the seas," as the chroniclers of the day so proudly wrote, was planned and conducted by was directed against Corea. Empress Heaven inspired her with determina- out delay at Cascades. tion to conquer Corea. So Jingu, ordering a fleet to be collected, set out in 201 A. D. upon Japan's first naval expedition. The empress won a rich reward for her courage and energy, and Corea became tributary to Japan. Immediately upon her return a child was born to the empress, who, when he grew up, became a great warrior, and is now worshiped under the name of All county warrants registered prior | Hachiman, god of war. In later times it became the fashion to attribute the Corean victory to the influence of the unborn child. All over Japan there Hachiman and Jingu, and as late as 1874, when the Japanese troops left for Formosa, many of them prayed for the special protection of Hachiman, god of soldiers.

BURMESE DACOITS.

A Lawyer Mistaken for One and Fired Upon at Rangoon.

The excitement among the English in Birmah over the robbers and murderers they call dacoits may be im-in the evening in a sampan with a Eurasian clerk. Suddenly another boat Neither Mr. Birch nor his clerk nor the boatman, who was from Chittagong, could understand much Burmese, and, fearing dacoity, he made signs to his boatman to pull as fast as he could. The other boat immediately opened fire and Mr. Birch was hit in the thigh. Mr. Birch, being armed with a Derringer, returned the shot and a pretty sharp duel began. A police boat eventually arrived and the thing was stopped. It turned out that the natives were not dacoits, but an antidacoit patrol, who opened fire on Mr. Birch's party because their challenge was not duly answered. The Rangoon Times questions whether, in the pres-ent unsettled state of feeling, the attack on a European was purely a mistake.
