If you meet a lady on the street this week and her face shows the signs of distress, you can safely conclude that she has just opened her house and is in search of servants. This is the time for that kind of amusement.—Baltimore American.

DON'T LISTEN to the dealer who is bent on bigger profits. The thing that he wants you to buy, when you ask for Doctor Pierce's Favorite Prescription, isn't "just as good." Proof of this is easy. The only guaranteed remedy for the ailments of womanhood is the "Favorite Prescription." If it ever fails to benefit or cure, in making weak women strong or suffering women well, you have your money back.

Anything "just as good," or as sure to bring help, could be, and would be, sold in just that way. This guaranteed medicine is an invigorating, restorative tonic, especially adapted to woman's needs and perfectly harmless in any condition of her system. It builds up, strengthens, regulates, and cures. For periodical pains, bearing-down sensations, ulceration, inflammation—everything that's known as a "female complaint," it's a remedy that's safe, certain, and proved.

Everything catarrhal in its nature, Catarrh itself, and all the troubles that come from Catarrh, are perfectly and permanently cured by Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy. No matter how bad your case or of how long standing, you can be cured.

Mrs. Younglove—I purchased some very tender beef today, dear; how do you prefer it? Mr. Younglove—Really, I don't know, love; but where I boarded that sort of beef was always rare.—Byracuse Post.

"Mrs. Nextdoor sent over that our Fido has dug up a lot of her flowers." Mamma—Well, run and tell her that it won't make any difference; he's to have a bath today anyway.—Chicago Inter Ocean.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure in the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address: F. J. CHENEY & Co., Toledo, O. Sold by Druggists, 75c.

Tramers—I regard my wife's piano-playing as a joke. You ought to do the same with your wife's. Frames—Tramers, you have never heard my wife play.—Chicago Tribune.

It Should Be in Every House. J. B. Wilson, 371 Clay St., Sharpshooters, Pa., says he will not be without Dr. King's New Discovery for consumption, coughs and colds, that it cured his wife who was threatened with pneumonia after an attack of "la grippe," when various other remedies and several physicians had done her no good. Robert Barber, of Cookport, Pa., claims Dr. King's New Discovery has done him more good than anything he ever used for lung trouble. Nothing like it. Try it. Free trial bottles at Snipes & Kincaid's.

A MYSTERIOUS OFFICIAL.

The Romantic Career of a Belgian Mandarin.

His Story as Related by Himself to a Couple of American Tourists Whom He Entertains in Royal Fashion.

While the young American bicyclists, Messrs. Allen and Sachtleben, were crossing the desert of Gobi, they heard much of a mysterious and powerful official called the Ling Darin. No one could tell who or what he was. Finally, as they emerged from the desert, starved, ill and ragged, they were met by a richly-dressed mandarin, according to the story they tell in the Century. He greeted them cordially in clear but broken English, and, mounted on waiting horses, they were attended into the city of Su-chou. "It was some time before the idea flashed across our minds that this might indeed be the mysterious Ling Darin about whom we had heard so much. 'Yes,' said he, 'that is what I am called here, but my real name is Spingard.'" He then went on to tell us that he was a Belgian by birth; that he had traveled extensively through China, as the companion of Baron Richthofen, and had thus become so thoroughly acquainted with the country and its people that on his return to the coast he had been offered by the Chinese government the position of custom mandarin at Su-chou, a position just then established for the levying of duty on the Russian goods passing in through the north-west provinces; that he had adopted the Chinese dress and mode of living, and had even married, many years ago, a Chinese girl educated at the Catholic schools in Tientsin.

"We were so absorbed in this romantic history that we scarcely noticed the crowds that lined the streets leading to the Ling Darin's palace, until the boom of a cannon recalled us to our situation. From the smile on the jolly face beside us we knew at once whom we could hold responsible for this reception. The palace gates were now thrown open by a host of servants, and in our rags and tatters we rolled at once from the hardships of the inhospitable desert into the lap of luxury.

"A surplus is not always so easily disposed of as a deficit—at least we were inclined to think so in the case of our Su-chou diet. The Ling Darin's table, which, for the exceptional occasion, was set in the foreign fashion with knives and forks, fairly teemed with abundance and variety. There was even butter, made from the milk of the Tibetan yak, and condensed milk for our coffee, the first we had tasted since leaving Turkey, more than a year before. The Ling Darin informed us that a can of this milk, which he once presented to Chinese friends, had been mistaken for a face cosmetic, and was so used by the ladies of the family. The Ling Darin's wife we found an excellent and even artistic cook, while his buxom twin daughters could read and write their own language—a rare accomplishment for a Chinese woman.

"As guests of our highly respected and even venerated host, we were visited by nearly all the magistrates of the city. The Ling Darin was never before compelled to answer so many questions. In self-defense he was at last forced to get up a stereotyped speech to deliver on each social occasion. The people, too, besieged the palace gates, and clamored for an exhibition. Although our own clothes had been sent away to be boiled, we could not plead this as an excuse. The flowing Chinese garments which had been provided from the private wardrobe of the Ling Darin fluttered wildly in the breeze, as we rode out through the city at the appointed hour. Our Chinese shoes, also, were constantly slipping off, and as we raised the foot to readjust them, a shout went up from the crowd for what they thought was a fancy touch in the way of riding."

A Brave Engineer.
During the recent strike in the coal regions, a Hocking Valley coal train was stopped by the strikers about a quarter of a mile from a wooden bridge. The leader of the strikers told the engineer that he must not pull the train through, and the engineer declared that he would. "Come down, Jim!" cried one of the strikers. "We know you too well to harm you. We have a keg of powder on that bridge, and when the boys see you coming they are going to light the fuse." "All right," replied the engineer, grimly. "I've promised to pull this train through, and through she goes." With these words he opened the throttle, and the train dashed on. The strikers saw the train coming and lit the fuse. On and over the bridge the train went; as the last car cleared the structure, bang! went the powder, and the bridge was blown to splinters. The fuse was a quarter-inch too long.

The Three Periods of Man's Life.
Lady Dufferin was closely related to Sheridan Le Fanu, of whom Lord Dufferin tells a little story. When a little boy, Sheridan le Fanu wrote an essay on the life of man, which ran as follows: "A man's life naturally divides itself into three parts—the first when he is planning and contriving all kinds of villainy and rascality; that is the period of youth and innocence. In the second, he is found putting in practice all the villainy and rascality he has contrived; that is the flower of manhood and prime of life. The third and last period is that when he is making his soul and preparing for another world; that is the period of dotage."

A Valuable Book.
Valued at five hundred dollars an ounce is a certain book in the British museum. It is a perfect copy of the original edition of Shakespeare's sonnets, published in 1609. There are only two copies in existence, and the second one is valued at five thousand dollars. As the book is only ten ounces in weight, it is worth a good deal more than its weight in gold.

ENGLISH LIFE.

As It Is Viewed by an Educated Native of the Continent.

Behvami Madhava, of India, who visited England in 1890, considered the English climate as the most remarkable of all the things that came under his notice. He thinks a race that could conquer such a climate and derive the comforts of life out of it, deserves dominion over all the elements of nature. He says, in "The Indian Eye on English Life," that it makes one laugh to hear the English talk of their "fine day."

One may speak of a fine five minutes, a fine half hour or hour—nothing beyond that, so far as I could see.

The climate of a country reflects itself pretty clearly in the temper, habits and general surroundings of the people. It is mainly the climate, and the peculiar mode of life which the people have to live in obedience to climatic influences, that make them so keen about everything.

The quantity and the manner of their eating puzzled and sometimes frightened me. Men and women eat freely at shops, in the streets, train, bus, or railway carriage. There is an absence of delicacy and deliberation about the matter, at which the grave oriental may well lift his eyebrows. In no respect, perhaps, does the average Englishman show himself so slow of imagination and wanting in taste as with respect to his daily food. He eats what his fathers ate before him. The cook knows nothing of proportion in seasoning his food; knows little of variety, and has a rough, slovenly touch. The English are heavy eaters, as a rule. I have never had a regular dinner with friends while in England, being unaccustomed both to their hours and their dishes. But I have had to put in an appearance at lunch or breakfast, to catch a friend about to leave town.

On one such occasion I saw a company of poets, philosophers and fanatics at table, presided over by a young lady, the daughter of the house. I sat there, wiping my forehead—they did the eating. I ate the perspiring—as I saw slices of beef disappearing, with vegetables, mustard, etc. I was pressed to join, but pretended to make a horrified protest.

The host then asked me slyly what I thought of the food and their mode of eating. I replied, instinctively: "It is horrible."

The reply set the gentlemen roaring, and my hostess blushing. But I could not help saying what I felt. How can a little stomach hold such an enormous lunch? The waste of vitality in their climate, and under their conditions of life, must be enormous; and it has, of course, to be replaced.

BURIAL OR CREMATION?

What the Noted French Authors Have to Say Concerning Them.

Some of the noted French authors have been giving a Paris editor their preferences in regard to burial or cremation. The Boston Herald summarizes their expressions: Alphonse Daudet says, as to being buried or cremated, that either would be exceedingly disagreeable to him, and when one remembers that Daudet is a great sufferer from an incurable disease his answer is a triumph of hope. Henri de Bornier frankly curses the editor for spoiling his dinner by such a query, and Armand Sylvestre is very French and poetic, for he says: "To become a puff of smoke in the sky or a blade of grass over a grave, that is the choice given to us. Well, I prefer the ground, from which flowers spring for lovers." Sarcey, the great critic, replies: "Theoretically, cremation appears to me the favorable method of disposing of the rubbish, the body, but I am not intolerant or exclusive in anything." "Burned! burned!" writes Sardou. "It will afford me great pleasure to be burned. Warmly yours." Another author says: "You ask me which I prefer, to be burned or buried? After mature reflection, I regret to say that I desire neither the one nor the other." Emile Zola signs his name to the most sensible "preference" of the lot. He writes: "My personal choice in the matter I have not yet considered, and I believe it is best to leave the thing to the decision of the loving ones we leave behind us. They alone can have pain or pleasure in it."

NAMED AFTER THE PRESIDENTS

Philadelphian Maintains Her Record for Patriotism in Her Nomenclature.

Of the twenty-three presidents of the United States John Adams has the largest number of namesakes, twenty-three, in the Philadelphia directory. James Buchanan ranks next, twenty-one men of nearly as many vocations bearing the name of the only Pennsylvania president. There are fifteen Andrew Jacksons and fourteen Andrew Johnsons. The name of the father of his country is borne by eight day laborers, one caterer, two waiters, one janitor, and one real estate dealer, or thirteen men in all, says the Record.

The grandfather of Benjamin Harrison has three namesakes, while one laborer and one upholsterer have the name of Tippecanoe's grandson. There are four James Monroes and the same number called John Quincy Adams. One hostler, one puddler, and a weaver are known as James Madison, and a bartender, a clerk, and a superintendent answer to the name of Zachary Taylor. There is but one Thomas Jefferson, whose occupation is not given, and the only John Tyler is a weaver. A brakeman and a minister of the Gospel are Franklin Pierces, but there is nobody with the name of Presidents Van Buren, Polk, Fillmore, Lincoln, Grant, Hayes, Garfield, Arthur, or Cleveland, except as a handle to the surname.
