STICKLERS FOR RELIGION. The absence of John E. Overton about whom the newspapers of Portland were worrying considerably recently is now satisfactorily explained. As is usual in such affairs there was a woman in the case. Miss Annie Engles has brought suit against John E. for promising to marry her, and deliberately trifling with her affections. It seems though that differences of religious beliefs, she being a Catholic and he not much of anything, but an ardent A. P. A., was what caused all the trouble. All the marriage lacked of consummation anyway was the license and the ceremony, yet in spite of this state of affairs the religous opinions of the lady were so strong that she refused to become Mrs. Overton unless the ceremony was performed by a priest. Overton, on the other hand, was willing to fulfill his promise to marry his girl, but thought a civil marriage by the genuine American justice of the peace was about the right thing. They could not agree, neither would yield, and as Overton was liable his home and fled. It strikes us under the circumstances, that the lady in the case is a greater stickler for her religion than she is for the rights of her child, or the feelings of her lover, while John, having no religion, can offer no reasonable excuse for refusing the services of the priest.

It is quite natural that the government should not want any false reports concerning the weather to be published by private parties, after going to so much expense to monopolize that industry.

As the political battle progresses the eyes of the democratic faithful turn fervently and longingly towards the white house for assistance, but in vain. The man-too-large-for-his-party is as silent as the sphinx, as imperturbable as the idols in the temple of Baal. Like the typical war steed he scenteth the battle from afar, and his gizzard doesn't seem to require any of it. Portland is having a nice little political scandal over the statement made by Manager C. S. Bratton, of the creamstory. This gentleman alleges that he paid certain of the city council $260 for passing a bill of $500 and agreeing to pass another of the same amount to pay for destroying garbage that was, in fact, never destroyed, and that the money J. was to be used towards paying the expenses of the city council and mayor on their visit to the Tacoma fair. The well-known circle on the pasture lands about six miles east of Helena, near the old overland stage road, and which has been a curiosity and a source of speculation for years, is identical with the fairy rings so common in some parts of England. There were formerly two of these rings, says the Helena (Mont.) Independent, but one has entirely disappeared within the last few years. the Helena (Mont.) Independent, but one has entirely disappeared within the last few years. The remaining one is about two hundred feet in diameter and forms a perfect circle. The ground forming the circle is about two yards wide and quite destitute of vegetation. Many theories have been advanced as to the cause of these rings. Some say that it is the result of lightning; others that a herd of buffalo, pursued by wolves, stopped and formed themselves into a circle as a means of defending their young, and thus tramped out the grass. These rings have attracted the attention of scientific men. and recent investigations have shown they are the result of centrifugal development of certain kinds of fungi, among which is the common mushroom, which shows a tendency to grow in this manner. The spot where it has grown is unfitted for its continued nourishment, and the spawn extends outward to new soil, forming the circle. These rings are common in eastern Montana, along the Musselshell river, but the one near Helena is the most perfect in the state.
