DONE WITH SLOT MACHINES. Stranger Got for a Penny at an

At the Congress street elevated station at evening during a rush a man, evidently a stranger, came along and halted in front of the machine which offers a stick of gum for one penny shoved into the slot. This man, says a Chicago paper, carried an overcoat, a large valise and an umbrella. He evidently figured out in his mind that it ent speed of flight to an unpracticed would be a good idea to take some gum home with him. So he took out a penny, but held it for a moment as if loath to part with it. He knew that the penny was good, it was backed by a good government, but he appeared to be doubtful as to the quality of the

The throng of people jostled him and the train gong was sounded. Carefully he selected a slot, and still more carefully did he insert the coin into the small opening. It went about three-fourths of the way in and stuck. He grabbed hold of the machine and shook it. The penny remained stuck fast. He put down his luggage, his coat and umbrella, took out a new knife, opened a hawk blade and with it strove to recover his money. The people ran against him, swore at him, almost knocked him down. He broke the blade of his knife, and just then a man hurrying to eatch a train stumbled over the value, got his foot hung in the armhole of the overcoat, plunged forward, kicked the valise open and smashed a bottle of horse liniment.

The man dropped his knife and ran after his valise, and when he gathered up the fragments of his baggage and his torn coat he returned to the slot machine to find that some one had stolen his knife. But he didn't swear. He simply said: "And they call this civilization."

DOG AND COYOTE.

The Hunted Wolf at Last Turns Upon

There were three of us in a wagon driving from Springdale, on the rail-road, to Hunter's Hot Springs, says the Northwest Magazine. We had forded the slough that during the season of high water in the Yellowstone cut off the approaches to the bridge-the water filling the wagon box and taking the horses almost off their feet at times in the swirl of the current. One of the dogs from the hotel joined us on terra men, says the New York Herald. firma—a mild-faced yellow cur with no fighting qualities. WELCOME THIEVES.

Those Who Are Able to Pay Well for What They Steal.

"What do you do with kleptoma-niacs?" was the question recently put to the proprietor of a large shop.

"We send them bills for what they take when we know them. If they are strangers, we act according to circumstances. A few days ago a lady was in the shop with her daughter-a beautiful little girl of twelve years. The girl was seen slipping a roll of costly ribbon into her satchel. We spoke to the mother, who became indignant. She opened the satchel to convince us that we were mistaken, when it was found to contain three lace handkerchiefs, two pairs of gloves, and the ribbon. All these articles had been appropriated."

"That was a plain case of stealing.
What did you do?"

"Well, we took the things back and said nothing. We can't afford to arrest wealthy people and injure our trade by making enemies among our rich cusomers."

"You were speaking of sending out bills for stolen goods; are they ever

Economy and Artifice.

The duchess of Buckinghr-, in her 'Glimpses of Four Continents," tells an amusing Maori story belonging to the period when these natives were at war with England. All sorts of tricks went on, such as are not only fair but commendable in war. When the Maoris were in want of bullets they used to show a dummy in the bush; of course, it was immediately fired at. A man in the background pulled it down by a string. "Oh!" thought the British soldiers, "we've done for him." Up came the dummy again, cautiously; bang! bang! went the British rifles. Down fell dummy, and this went on till some worse marksman than usual cut the dummy's rope. No Maori would go up the tree to splice it, for that exposure meant certain death. The bullets were all taken out of a little earth bank

WING MOVEMENTS OF BIRDS.

Well Marked Characteristics of Those with Sustained Power of Flight. All birds of great and sustained powers of flight have one well marked characteristic—they have long wings, with sharply pointed ends. And the general truth of this will be at once admitted if the rule be applied to species celebrated for rapid flight. Another point is worthy of notice. The apparatus eye is most deceptive. A heron as it rises and flaps languidly along the course of a brook, appears not only to progress slowly, but to use its wings in like manner. And yet the cuke of Argyll has pointed out, and every one may verify the statement by his watch, that the heron flaps its wings at a rate of not less than from one hundred and twenty to one hundred and fifty times in a minute. This is counting only the downward strokes, so that the bird really makes from two hundred and forty to three hundred separate movements a minute.

Our short-winged game birds fly with incredible velocity, and any attempt to observe or count their wing movements haves but a blurred impression upon he eye, whilst in some species so quick is the vibratory movement as to prevert it being seen. Driven grouse, fly-ing "down wind," have been known to eriously stun sportsmen by falling upon their heads. A grouse does not nove its wings as rapidly as a partidge, though a man was once clean mocked out of a battery by a grouse which had councided and killed another aird in midair; and colliding is not an afrequent occurrence. As illustrating he above qualities of flight, the case of the hestrel, or windover, may be taken. On a summer day one may frequently see this pretty little falcon standing against the blue, in what seems an absolutely stationary position, as though suspended by an invisible silken thread. But let a meadow mouse so much as move and it drops to the sward in an instant.

Chesapeake Bay Churacters.

It is an interesting revelation of character to the northerner to go down the Chesapeake bay by any one of several steamboat lines running from Balti-more to points in Maryland and Virginia, on each shore of the bay. The boats are of very different quality and speed from those that ply the East river and the Hudson, and the passeners are usually southerners or border state folks. There is much talk of polities and hunting-"gunning" is the more usual term-a great deal of tobacco chewing, and an easy familiarity among the passengers and between them and the officers of the boat. The voyage on the Chesapeake, if taken by moonlight or by day, is as charming and varied as one could wish, and the steamboats run up half a dozen tidal rivers that are beautifully clear and lined with an abundant semi-tropical growth of trees and shrubs. Here and there one catches a glimpse of the grounds attached to a house having what Marylanders call a water situation, and there are occasional stops at private wharves to receive as freight the products of one or more farms.

He Was Plain But Not Foolish. At a ball one evening, a plain country gentleman had engaged a pretty coquette for the next dance, but a gallant yachting captain coming along persuaded the young lady to abandon her previous engagement in favor of himself. The other, overhearing all that had passed, moved toward a card table and sat down to a game of whist. The captain, a few minutes afterward, stepped up to the young lady to excuse himself, as he was engaged to another he had forgotten. The coquette, much chagrined, approached the whist table, hoping to secure her first partner, and said: "I believe, sir, it is time to take our places." The old-fashioned suitor, in the act of dividing the pack for the next dealer, courteously replied: "No. madam, I mean to keep my place. When ladies shuffle, I cut."

A Good Reason.

An exchange reports the agreastic saying of a master of elecution who was instructing an unusually dull pupil. "When you have finished your lecture," said the teacher, "bow gracefully and leave the platform on tiptoe."
The pupil was dull, but not so very dull which the Maoris had made behind the tree where the dummy appeared, and were used over again. It was a long the treather, "so as not to the teacher, "so as not to the treather, "so as not to wake the audience."
