But it's only reasonable. As a blood - cleanser, flesh - builder, and strength-restorer, nothing like the "Discovery" is known to medical science. The diseases that it cures come from a torpid liver, or from impure blood. For everything of this nature, it is the only guaran-teed remedy. SNOBS NOT WANTED. A Kentuckian's Story of a Political Cam-paign in the Blue Grass State.

John C. Underwood, who was elected lieutenant governor of Kentucky on the same ticket with Luke Blackburn, is an amusing story teller, particularly when he is started on the subject of political stumping in Kentucky. "Our people," said he to a New York Evening Post man not long ago, "don't like snobbishness. I remember one time when I was stumping one of the mountain counties I bought twenty-five dollars' worth of nickels and carried them in my saddle bags. At every log cabin I would ride up and ask for a drink of water. Out would come a little boy or girl with a gourd dipper of warm water. I would take a swallow, then drop a nickel in the dipper. The little one would run in and I would go on. The child's mother would come out and have the generous gentleman pointed out. The consequence was that I got the vote of that house. Well, one morning I rode up to a house and a little girl brought me out a dipper of water. I felt in my pocket and discovered that I hadn't a copper.

"'Little girl,' said I, 'I generally have a nickel somewhere about me, but I haven't to-day, so I'll give you what's the next best thing for a girl, and that's a kiss,' and I got down off my horse and kissed her for my own little blue-eyed girl at home. Another little blackeyed girl here showed up, and I had to kiss her for a niece of mine she looked like. By this time, another little girl showed up, half a head taller than the rest, and, not to be impartial. I kissed her; when I found that four or five other girls had gathered, and I was in for it. So, beginning with the smallest, Looking up, I saw that there were two The worst cases of Chronic or three old ladies laughing at me, and, thinking I had made a bad break, I

"'Well, I'm blankety blanked, I heard him say, 'if he don't catch my vote. No snob thar, gentlemen. Jest as soon kiss a poor man's wife as a rich one's!' That settled it, and I got one hundred and fifty more votes in that county than any other man on the

A DOG'S QUEER RIENDSHIP. The Animal Deserts His Master for One Whom He Had Defended.

It is often said that a benefit con ferred does more to promote friendship than a favor received. If you would cultivate a friendly feeling toward another, do him a kindness; if you would secure his lasting friendship, get him to do you a kindness. There is some truth, at any rate, in this view of the case; and it applies even to dogs, as is shown strikingly by a story related in "Gold, Sport and Coffee-Planting in Mysore," by Mr. R. H. Elliot.

Mr. A. told me that he once wounded a tiger which afterward sprang on him, knocked him down and seized him by the hand and arm. With Mr. A. was a large dog, which at once attacked the tiger, and diverted him from Mr. A. After driving off the dog, the tiger returned to Mr. A., and commenced worrying him, but was again attacked by the dog.

The dog was driven off three or four times, but the tiger was all the while losing strength, and finally died. The dog was uninjured. Now comes the curious part of the story.

The dog, which was not affectionate, belonged to Mr. A.'s brother, and previously had taken no interest in anyone but his master. Now, however, he refused to go home with his master, but stuck closely to the wounded man, and when some carbolic acid, which caused pain, was applied by Mr. A.'s brother to the wound, the dog began to growl and show other signs of dis-

He would not allow anyone to come near Mr. A. except his own special servant, and lay under the bed with his nose sticking out, keeping close

When Mr. A. was carried to the doctor, some thirty-five miles away, the dog went, too, and on the doctor's applying carbolic acid and setting the bones, which caused the patient to cry out, the dog at once seized the doctor by the leg.
In about three months Mr. A. was quite cured. After that the dog lost all interest in him, and returned to his master; and if he met Mr. A. by chance merely acknowledged his recognition of him by the faintest wag of his tail.

A year afterward, happening to meet the doctor, whom he had not seen in the meantime, he at once flew at him and seized him by the trousers.

DANGEROUS COURAGE. Trainers Who Are Rashly Venturesom with Wild Animals.

Beside the regular tamers of wild beasts, of whom the public know from having seen them at their work, there are some more obscure heroes in a wild beast show, namely, the grooms. These are the men who live among the wild beasts; who go into their cages every day, and sleep within a few feet of the iron bars in order to be ready for any emergency. Cleveland Moffett, in McClure's magazine, says that from living thus in an atmosphere of perpetual danger the grooms come to have a curious indifference to claws and langs. Every one must admire a man who can bear pain and face danger. The lion tamer, William Philadelphia, is such a man. Many times had I watched him in his "act" with Black Prince. and wondered whether the lion was really in earnest as he struck and roared with such apparent vicioushess, or whether he had simply a part. the lion looked as if his one desire was to kill the little man who tensed him so with rod and whip, smiling all the time under his yellow mustache.

night Black Prince sprang ten feet through the air straight at Philadelphia, who saved his life by dodging, but did not escape the sweep of the lion's forearm.

No one knew that, however, for the tamer showed no sign of injury, but brought his heavy whip down with a stinging cut over the lion's head, and went through the "act," holding a handkerchief to his face now and then, but smiling as before.

When he left the ring it was found that one of the lion's claws had laid his cheek open almost from eye to lip; and yet the man was smiling.
"He meant to kill me," said Philadelphia, as his face was being bound up. "We will never show that lion again," said the manager, much excited. "Oh yes, we will," answered the wounded tamer. "I will make him work to-morrow as usual." And he did, teasing and prodding him that day as never before, as if daring him to do his worst.

Expensive Carefulness.

An unusual summons was received over the telephone not long ago by Dr. David Birney, of the University of Pennsylvania, from a wealthy man in New York, who wished him to go to Long Island. Dr. Birney endeavored to find out something about the nature of the case he was expected to treat, but the man, after securing his promise to go, refused to talk further over the 'phone. The doctor packed a case of instruments at random, and met the man in New York. After taking dinner at the Waldorf they took the train for Long Island, but not a word was said about the operation. When they arrived the man thanked the doctor and paid him fifty dollars; then, in response to the look of wonder from the astonished surgeon, he said: "I saw my sister bleed to death in a railroad accident for want of a physician, and since that day I have never traveled without one.

A Plunger's Fad.

It is told of Arthur Cartwright, a notable of London, who ran through three million seven hundred and fifty thousand dollars in the course of three years, in the days of the late duke of Newcastle, that he invariably traveled with his coffin. It was his habit to keep it on a trestle in his sitting-room in Pall Mall, and he used to store cigars, packs of cards and bottles containing divers kinds of spirits and mineral waters. He was wont to say he before he required it.

WRITING ONE'S FIRST NOVEL. The Delight and Dread of the Ordeal to the Seeker of Literary Fame. Sooner or later, somehow, anyhow, I was bound I was to write a field writes Robert Louis Stevenson in Me-Clure's. It seems vain to ask why. Men are born with various manias; from my earliest childhood it was mine to make a plaything of imaginary series of events, as soon as I was able to write I became a good friend to the paper makers. * * * The succession of defeats lasted unbroken till I was thirty-one. By that time I had written little books and little essays and short stories, and had got patted on the back and paid for them, though not enough to live upon. I had quite a reputation. I was the successful man. I passed my days in toil, the futility of which would sometimes make my cheek to burn-that I should spend a man't energy upon this business and yet could not earn a livelihood, and still there shone ahead of me an inattained ideal. Although I had attempted the thing with vigor not less than ten to twelve times, I had not yet written a novel. All—all my pretty ones—had gone for a little and then stopped inexorably, like a schoolboy's watch. might be compared to a cricketer of many years' standing who should never have made a run. Anybody can write a short story—a bad one, I mean—who has industry and paper and time enough; but not everyone may hope to write even a bad novel. It is the length that kills. The accepted novelist may take up his novel and put it down, spend days upon it in vain, and write not any more than he makes haste to blot. Not so the beginner. Human nature has certain rights; instinct—the instinct of self-preservation-forbids that any man (cheered and supported by the consciousness of no previous victory) should endure the miseries of unsuccessful literary toil beyond a period to be measured in weeks. There must be something for hope to feed upon. The beginner must have a slant of wind, a lucky vein must be running, he must be in one of those hours when the words come and the phrases balance themselves-even to begin. And having begun, what a dread looking forward is that until the book shall be ac-complished! For so long a time the slant is to continue unchanged, the vein to keep running; for so long a time you must hold at command the same quality of style; for so long a time your puppets are to be always vital, always consistent, always vigorous. I remember I used to look, in those days, upon every three-volume novel with a sort of veneration, as a feat not, possibly, of literature, but at least of physical and moral endurance and the courage of Ajax.

BUTTED EACH OTHER.

How Two Negroes in Slavery Days Tried to Settle a Trifling Dispute.

"One of the most novel conflicts I ever saw between two belligerents of the human race," said Milo Stafford, of New Orleans, to a writer for the St. Louis Globe-Democrat, "took place between two negroes on my plantation a few years before the war. A dispute had arisen between them over the possession of an old pair of trousers, and they were just on the point of begin-ning hostilities when I arrived at a point where I could take in the scene without being observed by them. Certainly suppose most people would call it brutal, but I determined to let them go ahead and pound one another for awhile, thinking the matter might just as well be settled between them then and there, as I knew if I interfered they would have it out at some future time. I was not prepared, however, for the mode of warfare they selected. Immediately they clasped their arms around each other and began butting their heads together like a pair of sheep. That they were in dead earnest was evinced by the terrific force of the blows, which sounded as loud as a well executed clap of the hands. There was no attempt at boxing, only, butting, and so effectually was it performed that in a very short time the heads of both antagonists were covered with blood. After continuing the fight for about five minutes both broke away and sat down to rest and recover their breath preparatory to renewing the encounter, as neither signified his willingness to give up. Thinking that the affair had gone far enough I stepped from where I had been concealed and demanded that they patch up their differences in a more peaceable way, and warned them that if any renewal of hostilities occurred they would be summarily dealt with. This warning had the desired effect and half an hour later I saw them working side by side chatting with each other cordially, as if their recent fight had no place even in their memories."

Highest Cross in America.

The Two Republics (Mexico) notes the erection on the summit of Mount Orizaba, or, as the Mexicans call it, Citlaltepetl (Star Mountain), of an iron cross seven yards high in place of the wooden one erected there a long time ago. The Two Republics asserts that this cross is the highest one in America. It has been supposed, it says, that the volcano Mistes, in Guatemala, was higher than Orizaba, but recent measurements make it appear that the latter mountain is the highest one north of the isthmus of Panama, and it is the highest one on the western continent on which a cross has been erected. Probably it is the highest one in the
