IN THE SAME BOAT.

China has asked this government to intercede for her with Japan, and stop the further advance of the Japanese army. By the grapevine telegraph line we have been enabled to obtain a copy of Secretary Gresham's reply to the request, which is as follows:

"Li Hung Chang, Peking, China, etc., etc.: "Your request for the kind offices of this administration has been considered by the cabinet. China's woes touched a tender spot in the president's heart, which has become both sore and sympathetic since last Tuesday. The administration will gladly do anything in its power to alleviate China's sufferings, and in return asks that the emperor intercede to save the administration from utter annihilation. The republican party is more bloodthirsty and aggressive than the Japanese. We know how it is ourselves.

"I have the honor to be etc., etc., and as badly licked as you are.

Miss Fay Fuller, the eminent Mazameress, has accepted a position as city editor and reporter on the Pendleton Tribune. Miss Fuller is said to be a brilliant writer, and to have a "nose for news." We have never had the pleasure of perusing anything from Miss Fuller's pen, nor the additional pleasure of examining her "noce for news," but we recognize the fact that woman, lovely woman, is rapidly forging ahead in the fields of journalism, and gladly welcome Miss Fuller into the newspaper fold, and this the more readily and heartily since our contemporary asserts that she is "one of the boys."

A Mysterious Matter.

A very mysterious thing happened here last week which those who are best posted, have little to say concerning.

As near as our reporter could learn the affair happened Wednesday night, it beling the culmination of a conspiracy by three individuals to kidnap Mies Blanche

The man who brought the note volunteered to take her down the river to Lyle, where another brother was to Lyle. Whether the man repented, or became frightened cannot be known, but he brought her home Thursday morning about 3 o'clock. We understand the to Lyle, but as she left here about 9 o'clock in the evening it is probable she did not get as far down the river as she supposed. It is also stated that the her brother's safety and so brought her Herald. back, advising her on parting to never go away again with a stranger.

A Sunday Trip.

The steamer Regulator made a special trip to the Locks yesterday, the mana- ersly gers of the company going down to see what could be done about the new incline, and the handling of freight until the latter was completed. The morning was rather foggy but the day proved to be a perfect one. The river, bordered with the golden foliage of the deciduous trees, with the background of noble pines and firs, was in one of its quiet moods, not a ripple appearing on the surface. It was a delightful day for a trip and those who failed to take advantage of it missed a treat. There were not more than a dozen besides the directors who made the trip, but they enjoyed it enough for a whole boat load.

TWO STUPID BOYS.

Incidents of the Boyhood of Dean Stanley and William E. Gladstone.

Dean Stanley once said to a little boy: "If I tell you I was born in the second half of 1815, can you tell me why I am called Arthur?" The name of the hero of Waterloo was then on all men's lips. When nine years of age Arthur was sent to a preparatory school. He was bright and clever, but he couldn't learn arithmetic. Dr. Boyd writes in Longman's Magazine that the master of the school, Mr. Rawson, declared that Arthur was the stupidest boy at figures who ever came under his care, save only one, who was yet more hopeless, and was unable to grasp simple addition and multiplication. Stanley remained unchanged to the end. At Rugby he rose like a rocket to every kind of eminence, except that of doing "sums." In due time he took a first-class at Oxford, where the classics and Aristotle's Ethics were the books in which a student for honors must be proficient. He would not have done as well at Cambridge, whose senior wrangler must be an accomplished mathematician. On the contrary, that other stupid boy, "more hopeless" than Stanley, developed a phenomenal mastery of arithmetic. He became the great finance minister of after years, William E. Gladstone, who could make a budget speech of three hours' length and full of figures, which so interested the members of the house of commons that they filled the hall, standing and sitting till midnight. The story has two morals. One is that a boy may be stupid in one study and bright in all the remaining studies. The other moral is, and it is most important, that a boy may overcome by hard study his natural repugnance to a certain study, and even be-come an eminent master of it.
