BRIEF MENTION.

Leaves From the Notebook of Chronicle Reporters.

License to wed was issued today to Lonzo McWilliams and Miss C. I. Butler. The Union Dancing Club will give their second dance at the opera house Wednesday evening.

The case of the State vs. Maloney is set for trial tomorrow, following the Eccles-Davenport case.

There is a stray steer, 2 years old, red, branded I. C. or J. C., at the Cascade Locks. Who owns him?

According to the reports, the Methodist revival at Hood River is the liveliest affair of the kind ever held in that city.

The King's Daughters will meet tomorrow at 2 o'clock at the residence of Mrs. Myers. A full attendance is requested.

Five gentlemen were up before the city recorder this morning, one of whom paid his fine, and the other four are engaged in cross-sectioning some cordwood for the use of the city.

Bob Fitzsimmons, the prize fighter, in a friendly boxing contest with Con Riordan, struck the latter on the chin, and Saturday he died from the effects of the blow. Fitzsimmons has been arrested.

The case against Eccles and Davenport will not go to trial tomorrow, as stated elsewhere, for the very good reason that Judge Bradshaw sustained the demurrer in the case, and so it went out of court.

Mr. D. Eccles, president of the Oregon Lumber Co., arrived from Ogden this morning. He was prosecuted along with Frank Davenport, superintendent of the planer, for obstructing the highway, the same being The Dalles & Sandy wagon road, and being found guilty was fined $100. The present case is an appeal from that decision. The case will come up for trial tomorrow morning.

Quite a delegation from Friendship Lodge, K. of P., of this city, will visit the lodge at the Cascade Locks next Saturday evening, to assist in knighting some of the good citizens of that place, and enjoying a fraternal visit.

Rev. E. K. Taylor of La Grande will preach at the Christian church tomorrow (Tuesday) evening, at 7:30 o'clock. Remember also the services by the Endeavor Society during the week. A cordial invitation is extended to all.

Judge Bradshaw got a hurry-up move on this morning, and after suggesting to the grand jury to do likewise, proceeded to regulate the attorneys. As a result there was a sudden sending for witnesses and preparation for trial by all of them.

There will be quite a large lot of freight up on the Regulator tonight. The new incline is about completed, and will be in operation by Wednesday night at the latest. All but heavy and bulky pieces can be handled and freight of all kinds will be received tomorrow, both here and at Portland.

Will Cates of 5-Mile sent four potatoes to this office Saturday that would go a long way towards furnishing a winter's supply to one of the families of the desiccated districts of Dakota. Two of them of the late-rose variety were ten inches long by three inches in diameter, and the other two were as large if not larger but of a different variety.

The O. E. & N. Co. has re-considered its decision that it was worth as much to haul goods from The Dalles to points east of it as it was from Portland to the same points, and so has put up the old schedule. The board of railroad commissioners will discover this some time and claim they did it. The railroad has a fashion of sneaking up on the board and doing things without its knowledge.

Friday afternoon, about 2 o'clock, the freight train under charge of Conductor Byrnes and Engineer Ryan picked up a man on the upper side of the Union Pacific track, one mile west of Coyote station, who had been injured by a passing train. One hand and one leg were cut off, and the other limb was fractured in a horrible manner. He gave his name as George Pearce, and said he came from New York, and was en route to Portland. In attempting to get on a passing train he had fallen, and the wheels passed over him. When asked how long he had laid by the track, he said about two hours, and that it was a silly act on his part to attempt to get on the train. The man was about 45 years of age, of respectable appearance, and appeared to be educated.

A Pleasant Evening With the Juveniles.

The juvenile department of the Independent Workers Lodge, I. O. G. T., is known as the Juvenile Temple, and on Saturday evening, Nov. 17th, they gave another pleasant entertainment, which will be long remembered by those who were present. Promptly at 8 o'clock the thirty-two girls and boys composing the temple marched into the hall, taking places with their superintendent, Mrs. Joles, in the front end of the hall, where seats had been reserved for them. The bright and happy faces of the children showed how much they enjoyed the exercise. The visitors and guests occupying the side seats left room in the center for marching, which was the first exercise on the program. This grand march consisted of marching and counter-marching, with various changes, which to be enjoyed must be seen. After this march the children formed in a semi-circle at the rear of the hall and sang their welcome song. The voices of so many children blended in harmony was really a glad welcome.

Katie Barrel was next called on, and recited "Birdie's Breakfast" very nicely. Grover Young then told us about the north wind and the grumblers and kickers.

A piano duet by Prudence Patterson and Pearl Joles showed careful training. The recitation, "Save the Children," by Effie Adams, was nicely rendered. The juveniles, marching and forming in semi-circle, then sang "A Song to Water."

Lulu Blakeney's recitation, "Drink, Drink, Drink," was well recited, and received due applause.

Wilber Varney did credit to himself in the way he recited the pathetic little poem "On the Street," which told of a little bootblack, in whom a show of sympathy by a customer awakened a responsive chord in his own heart, and the boy and man became one in sympathy.

Six little girls now marched to the end of the hall, five of them carrying little brown jugs and the sixth a small glass pitcher of water, the jugs having various names on their sides, one rum, another brandy, another wine, the others alcohol and beer; having formed in line they sang a song, of which the chorus was: "O no, no, no drink for me, unless it be water pure and free." After this chorus came a little recitation by one of the girls, denouncing the stuff after which her jug was named; then repeating the chorus another girl recited her denunciation and declaration to abstain from the stuff after which her jug was named, and so on through the five, the sixth girl holding up the pitcher of water declared allegiance to it in which all joined. "The Drunkard Redeemed" was the title of the next exercise and was nicely rendered by Martha Schooling.

But the exercise causing the greatest enthusiasm was that of a song by Lela Kelsay, entitled "The Kicking Mule." This little lady, who is only forty inches high, described the aforesaid mule in very graphic language in her song, and the hearty applause she received showed how well her effort to please had been appreciated. She will doubtless be heard from again.

Nellie Clark in her recitation described a victim of the liquor business returning from the poorhouse, where she had been sent, and addressing a meeting of citizens assembled to debate the advisability of issuing a license to a liquor dealer.

"Cheering the Sick," by Miss Lillian Snell, described one of those doleful persons calling on a sick lady and telling her all the sad and doleful news she had collected, and at the same time saying she had come to cheer her up.

The program closed with a song by the Temple entitled "Kind Friends Good Night."

The Temple is doing nicely and no pains are spared in training the children aright on the temperance question. Children can spend a pleasant and profitable hour at Fraternity hall every Saturday afternoon under the care of Mrs. E. Joles, the superintendent of Juvenile Templars. Let the children come and enjoy the time and be trained for future citizenship in this grand country of ours. KNOW NOTHING.

Court Notes.

Buchler against O'Neill, reply filed. Halliday against J. G. and I. N. Day, motion to remove to U. S. court overruled.

State against Guy Southwell, indicted for shooting a horse, demurrer pending.

State against Dan Maloney, indicted for assault and battery, for trial.

State against Eccles and Davenport, appeal from justice court at Hood River, in which they were fined for obstructing a highway.
