Marvelous results.
 From a letter written by Rev. J. Gundersman, of Dimondale, Mich., we are permitted to make this extract: "I have no hesitation in recommending Dr. King's New Discovery, as the results were almost marvelous in the case of my wife. While I was pastor of the Baptist Church at Rivers junction she was brought down with Pneumonia succeeding La Grippe. Terrible paroxysms of coughing would last hours with little interruption and it seemed as if she could not survive them. A friend recommended Dr. King's New Discovery; it was quick in its work and highly satisfactory in results." Trial bottles free at Snipes & Kinersly's Drug Store. Regular size 50c. and $1.00.

"Run brought you here, I presume," said the prison visitor. "That's what," said Rubberneck Bill. "After this when I get out I am going to stick to what I was raised on—gin."—Indianapolis Journal.

Henry Wilson, the postmaster at Welshton, Florida, says he cured a case of diarrhoea of long standing in six hours with one small bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. "What a pleasant surprise that must have been to the sufferer. Such cures are not unusual with this remedy. In many instances only one or two doses are required to give permanent relief. It can always be depended upon. When reduced with water it is pleasant to take. For sale by Blakeley & Houghton Drugists.

This is the hunting season, when men handle their guns with the muzzle pointed toward themselves, and the accident columns in the newspapers are long and lamentable.—Buffalo Express.

When persons are weak and languid, from sickness or overwork, feel debilitated and depressed, it is an indication that the blood is out of order, and they need help to throw off the miserable feeling. The best remedy for this purpose is Dr. J. H. McLean's Strengthening Cordial and Blood Purifier. It restores lost strength, gives vigor to circulation, promotes good appetite and a flow of cheerful spirits. Price $1.00 per bottle. For sale by the Snipes-Kinersly Vegetarian (who has been chased across the fence by cattle)—"Just wait you stupid brutes. From this moment I am no longer a vegetarian."—Fleegende Blätter.

IT WAS NO CAT.
The Malodorous Experience of Two Unsophisticated Policemen.
 Two policemen were trudging along their beat on Pequot avenue, in the heart of New London, at a late hour the other night, says the Boston Herald, and they were not hunting at all—not scenting game at any rate—when a thickset looking cat sauntered along the sidewalk, clad in a gay striped suit fashionable in country walks, at this season.

"Kitty! Kitty!" called one patrolman, kindly. "Come here, kee-ecty!" and then he tapped the stranger gently with the tip of his night stick. But it was not a cat in the least—not a cat of the kind they were used to—and it grossly and basely abused their confidence, and so they fairly hammered the stuffing out of the ungrateful beast, both men did.

In fact it seemed as if they could never get their fill of satisfaction out of it, so brimful of indignation and resentment and other emotions and things were they; and then they bore the frail remains of their prey into the police station with more deference than tenderness.

But the police captain temporarily excused them from doing further duty in the populous and cultured walks of the town, and nightly now they patrol a lonesome and sequestered picket in the far outskirts, and relations are strained between them and the rest of their fellow-citizens.

A New View of the Ox.
 "A railroad train that I was on the other day," said a man, "went with a rush and a roar across a little bridge under which at that moment there was a man driving an ox team. A moment later as we rushed on we saw the team out on the road, the oxen jumping and skipping and apparently trying to run away. The driver was standing in the cart and swinging his good around and bringing it down on them with vigorous whacks; finally he checked 'em. I don't pretend to know much about oxen, maybe they're given to running away, but to me it was a new view of the dull and plodding ox."

A Kentucky Indictment.
 A few years ago a Kentucky grand jury brought in an indictment in which it stated that the defendant "did unlawfully, willfully and maliciously kill and destroy one pig, the personal property of George Pigg, the said pig being of value to the aforesaid George Pigg. The pig thus killed weighed about twenty-five pounds and was a mate of some other pigs owned by said George Pigg, which left George Pigg a pig less than he (said George Pigg) had of pigs, and thus ruthlessly tore said pig from the society of George Pigg's other pigs against the peace and dignity of the commonwealth of Kentucky."

ABOUT EMBLEMS.

The Significance of Many of Them Shrouded in Mystery.
 What the learned Dr. Aiken once called "A Visible Image of an Invisible Thing," in fact the emblem, has so little record in modern times, that even the encyclopedias give concerning it only the dictionary definition. Yet two centuries ago it formed the subject for the work of some of the best writers, painters and engravers of Europe; while antiquity has illustrated it in a myriad of forms, the meaning of which is in thousands of instances lost to us in the mystery and darkness that overshadows the history of so much of human life.

Any object which presents at a glance a meaning beyond its mere appearance is an emblem. The torch for illumination, the scales for justice, the anchor for hope, the owl for wisdom, the butterfly for the soul, the scythe and hour-glass for death. The first attempt at writing was emblematical, and Chinese writing is so to this day. So were the Egyptian hieroglyphics and the same can be said of our own Indian picture writing.

All coinage, from the first Hebrew shekel to the last American dollar; all the flags of all nations; all state or national seals, are emblematical of something. The cross, the crown, the scepter, the miter, every church steeple in every land, mosque, minaret and pagoda, temple and shrine, idol and fetish, all are emblems.

Every letter in every language, every figure, the sign of every trade and profession, the roses of England, the lilies of France, Ireland's shamrock and Scotland's thistle, are all emblems. And yet, strangely enough, it is only by persistent search that one can find out even the least about the origin of this class of art, the meaning of its varied forms, the hidden sense being often lost utterly while only the form remains.

HIS LEG WAS BROKEN.
But It Was a Wooden Leg and Didn't Hurt Him Seriously.

Police officers detailed in charge of postal wagons see more of the woes and ills of suffering humanity than most people. Late one night a short time ago a Chicago saloonkeeper called for the ambulance from the West Chicago avenue station, saying there was a man lying on the sidewalk near Carpenter and Front streets badly injured and unconscious. The unfortunate was bundled into the ambulance and landed in the examining room at the county hospital. On the way to the hospital the sufferer became partially conscious and indicated that his right leg was the cause of great discomfort. He could not speak English, but the officers understood that his right leg had been injured. In the examining room he made an extremely wry face when the physician approached, and it was then discovered he had been drinking heavily. The physician felt the man's right leg between the knee and ankle without drawing up the pantaloons or exposing the skin, and found the bone broken badly four or five inches above the ankle, and the patient was then removed to the operating room. Here a more complete examination was made, and it was learned the man's right leg was broken in the most terrible manner. When the patient saw the condition of his leg he actually shed tears. It was a wooden leg, and he was drunk and bemoaning the expense to be incurred in the purchase of another leg.

HOME VIEWS OF EDISON.
Some of His Neighbors Don't Believe That He Is Such a Wonder. After All.
 Prophets are not the only great people without honor in their own country, said a man who had spent some time at Menlo Park looking for Thomas A. Edison. I wanted to see the experimental apparatus on which the American wizard is at work with a view to reducing iron ore by electricity. The workmen told me I could see it only with the permission of Mr. Edison, whom I could find somewhere about the place. To my disappointment I failed to find him, but I had an instructive search. The people thereabouts do not think the inventor of the kinetoscope is such a very great man. "He only got it (the idea) accidentally," said one woman.

On my way out I met a locomotive engineer who knew Edison, and he told me with great glee of a really practical accomplishment of the inventor's ability to run a locomotive.

"Edison once rode in my cab," he said, "and he told me how, when he was a train dispatcher, he once forgot orders and allowed two trains on the same section of track. He corrected his mistake, but not so soon that the escape from collision was due to him, and he was discharged. While waiting for a train to the next town—it was in the west—an accident happened to an engineer who was to take an important train up the road. No one to replace him was at hand, and Edison took his place and ran the train. Think of that!" added the engineer.

A BISHOP'S BAD NIGHT.
Popped into a "Spare Bed" in Which Silver Was Stored.

An eminent bishop who was quartered in the house of the wealthiest resident in a certain village, while his host's wife was away, occupied the "spare bed." He is a thin man, and when his host inquired in the morning how he had slept and hoped he had passed an agreeable night, he answered, with some vehemence: "No, I did not; I passed a very disagreeable night, indeed."

The bishop departed, and when the wife of his host returned she naturally inquired who had been in the house in her absence.

"Bishop P—," said the husband. "Bishop P—! Where did you put him to sleep?"

"In the spare bed, of course."
 "In the spare bed!" shrieked the horrified matron. "Why, I put all the silver under the mattress before I went away."
