MINERS VS. THE RAILROAD.

The miners and the owners of mineral lands in Southern Oregon are much aroused over the prospective selection of railroad lands in that region.

The secretary of the interior has issued the lands beyond his jurisdiction, and no further hearing to determine the character of the land can be had.

There seems to be now no other way of redress for the prospector and miner than that mentioned above, which has led to some adverse criticism of our members of congress and the officials of the interior department.

A private citizen in filing on government land must make what is known as the non-mineral affidavit. That is, he must swear that there are no valuable minerals on the land he proposes to locate.

The honorable secretary may allow that ruling to stand as his idea of right and justice; but if he does, he violates the law he has sworn to uphold.

Congress met at noon today and the democracy now have until the 4th of March next to legislate as best suits it.

It is said that the president is formulating a new plan for the currency, if so, that question may lead to the eventual destruction of our present national bank system.

The Portland Universal exposition opened Saturday night with an attendance of 20,000 people and a brilliant display of fireworks.

display of fireworks. It is to be hoped that it will prove a success financially and that the debt that has hung so heavily on the management may be entirely lifted.

COMPOSING ON THE MARCH.

Melody Came to Him in the Ranks, and It Almost Caused Trouble.

Benvenuto Coronaro, the composer, recently published some reminiscences in one of the Italian musical papers.

He was serving once in the army, and was ordered to take part in a long march. On the way a melody came to him.

"What are you writing?" thundered the captain. I handed him the notebook, which he read quickly.

"The man is to continue writing," he went on. "But if that piece (and he pointed to the sheet of paper in my hand) is not played by the regimental band to-morrow morning he will be put in prison for eight days."
