The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature to do its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers, that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of Testimonials. Address: E. J. Mrs. T. (to tramp at door)—I don't believe you ever did anything in all your life. Tramp—Oh, yes'm; I've done time.—Texas Sitings.

Any one who has children will rejoice with L. B. Mulford, of Plainfield, N. J. His little boy, five years of age, was sick with croup. For two days and nights he tried various remedies recommended by his friends and neighbors. He says: "I thought sure I would lose him. I had seen Chamberlain's Cough Remedy advertised and thought I would try it as a last hope and am happy to say that after two doses he slept until morning. I gave it to him next day and a cure was effected. I keep this remedy in the house now and as soon as any of my children show signs of croup, I give it to them and that is the last of it." 50 cent bottles for sale by Blakeley & Houghton Druggists.

An Old Woman's Reflections on the Virtues of Long Ago.

"Law," said one of the wealthiest old ladies in Clarke county, Ind., the other day, according to the Louisville Commercial, "girls are not what they used to be. This is the first time that I have been in town for thirty years, and I had no idea that there was any such carryings-on. Why, there is a man who works for a living at so much per week, and his family has a carriage, and they spend nearly everything he makes. The dinners they have at their houses are nicer than I have, and their children are dressed finer than any I ever saw before. I reared fifteen children myself, but none of them ever had such clothes as those children of this man have. Still, all of mine now have good farms and bank accounts, and go to church, and try to be Christians. When I was married my husband had a horse and I owned a cow. They were all that we had. We rented a place, and now we not only own that place, but several more in that neighborhood, besides some business property in Louisville. I have never worked hard, and have enjoyed myself in a quiet way. These people who are spending everything they get, and would be in a bad fix if the husband were suddenly thrown out of work, can hardly be having a better time than I am, because they must be continually worrying as to how long they can keep it up. I am positively alarmed when I think of it myself. These are the kind of people that fill the almshouses. Everybody can save, unless there is sickness in the family."

A THREE-EYED LIZARD.

One of the Most Striking Curiosities of the Reptilian Kingdom. "Speaking of lizards, the queerest one we have seen for a long time reached us the other day from New Zealand," says a scientist in the Washington correspondence of the St. Louis Globe-Democrat. "It is named the 'cyclopean lizard' because it has a third eye on the top of its head. However, it is not a true lizard, but a sort of connecting link between the lizards and the turtles. The species is limited to a small island near New Zealand, and it has been rendered almost entirely extinct by hogs with a taste for its flesh. It attains a length of three feet, but all of the big ones were eaten up long ago. The third eye is rudimentary, but a dissection of its structure plainly reveals the eye socket, the lens, and a strand of nerves connecting the visual tract of the brain.

"This eye is interesting chiefly because it corresponds to the third eye with which every human being is provided. The so-called 'third eye' is actually an eye that has become rudimentary. The gland is about the size and shape of a pea, and is situated in the middle of the head. Place the end of your finger just above the bridge of your nose, on a level with the eyes, and directly behind that point five inches is the gland. It still retains somewhat the structure of an eye. The ancients supposed it to be the center of consciousness and the seat of the soul."

SAWED A SALOON IN TWO.

Straddling a State Line, It Made a Lot of Trouble. Bill Lewis, one of the first to settle in Kansas City, and one of the wickedest men that ever lived there, died a few days ago, says a western exchange. Since 1866 he has been known as the king of Toad-a-Loup, a district which harbored about all the known criminals in town. The saloon he kept in Toad-a-Loup was hardly less notorious than himself. It was built exactly on the state line between Kansas and Missouri and was furnished with a movable bar. Lewis paid no license, and when the Missouri tax collector called upon him he moved his bar over in Kansas. When the authorities of the latter state attempted to arrest him he transferred his business in a minute to Missouri. He was arrested many times, but had to be released. Concerted action on the part of the authorities of both states finally ended the career of Lewis' barroom in Toad-a-Loup. The direction of the state line was chalked out on the saloon and the structure was sawed in two from roof to cellar with an immense cross-cut saw.

HE KNEW A TENDERFOOT.

A Jerseyman's Exciting Experience with a Pennsylvania Mine Mule. Patrick Murray, of Perth Amboy, N. J., had an exciting experience a few days ago with a mine mule at Summit Hill, Pa., which he will never forget, says the New York Post. When he reached the bottom of the slope and proceeded to explore the gangway he attracted the attention of one of the mules. He is at a loss to know what angered the animal, but the beast came for him at full speed, and Murray started for a "heading" with nothing but the light of a miner's lamp to guide him.

It was a race for life. The mule was rapidly closing the gap, when the Jerseyman reached two mine cars. He plunged between them. The mule counter-marched and began using his hind feet with terrible effect. He kicked the stout oak planks of the car into kindling wood, and while he was occupied in this manner Murray made his escape and returned to the surface. He is fully satisfied that the mine mule is not to be trifled with, especially if you are a tenderfoot with a red necktie.

Something She Could Paint.

Mme. d'Albertin, one of the lesser painters of France, was as conceited about her artistic ability as she was notorious for her excessive use of cosmetics. On one occasion, a certain count, who held her in much disesteem, lost a bet to her. "And what will madame choose?" he asked, with mock courtesy. "Something in my art," she smirked. "Something I can paint." "Very well, madame," he replied, bowing himself out. A day later madame received a package from the count, which, upon being opened, revealed a life-size drawing of her own face in outline.
