NO TIME TO SWAP HORSES.

The school book question is the most important one before the people of Oregon today; but if we can judge of public sentiment by the expression thereof, as made through the columns of the newspapers, and we know of no better measure, the question is already as good as settled. Our exchange list contains at least one-half of all the papers published in the state, and covers all parts and sections of the state. As our young democratic friend in Portland said here at the meeting of the democratic clubs last winter, "From the snow-capped summits of the Siskiyou to the smiling boom of the grand Columbia." For the past two months we have carefully noted the editorial expression of all of them on this question. That editorial expression has also been backed up by hundreds of communications from teachers, school officers and parents interested in the subject, and it is practically unanimous. We feel safe in saying, therefore, that the sentiment of the state is also unanimous, and that sentiment is against any material change in the school books. With regard to the grammars in use, there is some difference of opinion, some sensible arguments being made as to the adopting of one system of grammar, instead of using one kind for one grade and another for a higher grade.

Some six weeks ago, in common with our contemporaries, we expressed our opinion on the matter and invited a discussion of the subject in the columns of THE CHRONICLE, and especially invited the opinions of those who thought otherwise than we did. Up to date no one has expressed dissatisfaction with the opinion therein advanced. We have been using the present system of books for a number of years, and the fact that the makers of some other series of books have suddenly discovered that their books are better, is at least capable of being thought not entirely disinterested.

The change of books would inflict a burden on hundreds of parents whose resources are already taxed to the utmost to keep their children comfortably clad, fed and in school. The richest man, unfortunately, does not generally raise the largest family, but the reverse of that proposition is true, and those who have the least worldly goods are most richly endowed with pledges of affection, as though a bounteous, but injudicious Nature would counter-balance the niggardliness of Fortune by giving more generously of all she had to give. Thus in changing school books the heaviest tax is thrown upon the poorest persons.

The interests of the parents, of the children, and therefore of the state, all demand that for the present, at least, the school books be left as they are. This is the sentiment of the newspapers of the state, therefore, as we have said, it is fair to presume it is the sentiment of the readers of these papers, for, after all, the press is but the mirror that reflects the opinions and sentiments of the public. We have no doubt that when the superintendents vote on the question that vote will be practically unanimous in favor of retaining the present system.

MUST BE A MISTAKE.

A dispatch of the 8th says: The text of the Connecticut supreme court's opinion ordering a re-trial of Dr. J. E. Lee, after acquittal by a jury for murder, the first record of the kind in the state, is given out today. Its main argument is the point that the old English common law was so cruel that judges then wisely held that an accused person after a jury acquittal, could not be put in jeopardy a second time for the same offense; but now that the old law has been relaxed, the criminal ought not to benefit by former practice, and justice be thwarted by errors of judicial ruling. The court of five judges was unanimous in the opinion. The opinion was written by Judge Hammeley.

It does not seem possible that the above dispatch can be true. If so the sooner those judges can be superseded by others with more common sense, and less legal learning, the better for the people of the state. Once that gate is opened there would be no end to litigation, no safety to individuals, and in a short time no regard for the law. A man once arrested for a crime could be kept at the pleasure of the judge whom he is brought before, and though acquitted, could be re-tried until finally a jury might be found to convict him.

Lawyers would revel in fees, and counties would be swamped with court expenses.

And now comes the report that Mr. and Mrs. W. K. Vanderbilt have made up. These people, unhappily married, have been washing the family linen in public for some time, and the fact that they have an immense amount of money is the only thing that makes their marital woes, in the eyes of the news mongers of the East, of sufficient importance to burden the telegraph wires and the columns of the daily papers with. Now that they have kissed and made up, let us hope that their bickering be not again inflicted upon the public. Many a better man had a sharper tongued wife, many a better woman a worse husband; therefore, as far as their individuality is concerned, their case is not an unusual one, and as their dollars cannot weep, although money talks, we see no occasion for further parading their infelicities. Give them and the public a rest.

The West and the South are a unit in demanding the building of the Nicaragua canal by the government. It will be strange indeed if they do not get what they ask. The legislation of this country for years has been more favorable to the eastern states than any others, and it is now time that that East concede something to the balance of the country. If it does not do so, it may find itself short of friends when it needs them most.
