THE PAY OF JOURNALISTS.

"In New York City the salaries are higher than anywhere else, partly because the cost of living is greater there than in any other large city. One editor-in-chief has the same salary as the president of the United States, $50,000 per year, and others receive from $10,000 to $12,000, or more than members of the cabinet. Managing editors are paid from $100 to $150 per week, or a better compensation than that of senators and representatives in congress. Editorial writers get from $50 to $75 per week as a rule, and in cases of rare ability as much as the average salary of a managing editor. City editors receive from $60 to $75 per week, and in a few instances $100. The pay of news editors is about equal to that of city editors. Literary, theatrical and musical critics average $50 per week. Copy-readers are paid from $40 to $45 per week. Reporters earn all the way from $15 to $60 per week, with an average of $40, and space-writers of particular talent have been known to make as much as $125 per week, though the limitation of topics and the pressure of competition usually keep their incomes down around those of the best paid reporters. There are some writers for syndicates of newspapers, men with names that have a certain value, who earn from $5,000 to $6,000 per year, and there are others of first-class technical capacity in various lines whose salaries occasionally reach $5,000. The pay of all classes of journalists averages 10 per cent lower in Brooklyn than in New York City." - Capt. Henry King, in the January Forum.

Captain Henry King may be correct in his statement as to salaries, but he is entirely unacquainted with his subject, and most woefully mistaken in the reasons he gives for the salaries in New York being higher than elsewhere, at least as far as the statement that the "standard of proficiency is higher" is concerned. It is a notorious fact that the New York editorial staffs do not begin to compare with those of other cities. Outside of Charles A. Dana there is scarcely an editorial writer in New York City whose reputation extends beyond the city limits, or at the most those of the state. Philadelphia, Cincinnati, Chicago, Louisville, San Francisco, and even Portland can show more talent than New York City. Much as we may disagree with the editor of the Oregonian, we recognize in him an abler all-around editorial writer than any New York can produce. Ambrose Bierce of San Francisco, who made the Argonaut famous; Henry Watterson of Louisville; Harry McEwen of San Francisco—all from minor cities are yet all more versatile and more incisive writers than those of New York City. Salaries may be higher in that city than elsewhere, but the reason is in the ability of the papers, with their large circulations to pay them. One thing will be noticed all through Mr. King's article, and that is that newspaper work, editorial and other, is very poorly paid, that is the men who do the writing. Managers get paid for business ability, but the fellows who push the lead pencils and furnish the reading matter are, considering everything, the worst paid class of intelligent workers in the entire world.

The state board of railroad commissioners have successfully silenced all insinuations concerning that body. It has been asserted and asseverated that they as a body, were of no practical use; that outside of drawing their salaries they did nothing. They have successfully refuted all of these statements, for they have made a comparison of the freight rates on the Oregon roads and those of other roads throughout the United States, showing that the charges here are much higher than in the East, (which, by the way, everybody knew, and knew to be perfectly legitimate too) and giving the further information that traffic has fallen off and that times have been hard. What is more, they have prepared this report for submission to the incoming legislature, but in order to relieve the profound suspense that the public are plunged in concerning their actions, the board kindly had the gist of the report published in advance. It will be seen by this that the play is not for the legislature, but to the benches. It is quite probable the commission will be continued, for there is no contending against the political bosses; but we want to say right now that they are of no more practical use than the tray of spades in a heart flush.

The Wall street bankers have made a formal demand on the president for the removal of Secretary Carlisle, claiming that he broke faith with them after the recent bond issue by springing his currency scheme, and that in consequence the price of bonds went down and caused the dissolution of the syndicate. The request is a peculiarly diffident one, coming as it does from the bashful and retiring operators of New York, but the president intimates that he will not ask the secretary for his resignation on that account. Wall street goes on the principle that "If you don't see what you want, ask for it." Things are at a pretty pass when a class of money speculators undertake to dictate to the government whom its officers shall be, and to demand the removal of an officer because he does not look after their especial interests in conducting the affairs of the country.

The celebrated trial of Steeves, the Portland attorney for the murder of George Sayre, is drawing near a close, and it is thought it will go to the jury tomorrow. It is one of those cases where the general impression is that the defendant is guilty but that the evidence is hardly strong enough to convict.

ECZEMA

From early childhood until I was grown my family spent a fortune trying to cure me of this disease. I visited Hot Springs, and was treated by the best medical men, but was not benefited. FROM When all things had failed I determined to try S. S. S., and in four months was entirely cured. The terrible Eczema was gone, not a sign of it left; my general health built up, and I have never had any return of the disease. CHILDHOOD I have since recommended S. S. S. to a number of friends for skin diseases, and have never yet known a failure to cure. GEO. W. IRWIN, Irwin, Pa. Never fails to cure, even after all other remedies have failed. On Treatise on Blood and Skin Diseases mailed free to any address.
