The Nicaragua Bill is Being Talked to Death and There is No Hope of its Passing.

Sibley Creates Excitement.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 8.—General debate on the currency and banking bill, according to the common understanding, was concluded with the adjournment of the house this afternoon, and the last day was marked with a most sensational speech. Mr. Sibley, a democrat of Pennsylvania, opened the session's debate with an attack upon the president, which exceeded in character of its description of the chief executive anything that has been heard on the floor.

The first business was a resolution from the committee on rules authorizing the appropriations committee to insert a clause in the sundry civil appropriation bill authorizing the transfer of the military prison at Fort Leavenworth, Kan., from the jurisdiction of the war department to the department of justice. Opposition was made by Broderick, rep., of Kansas, who asserted the question had been before the military committee, and contended the house was entitled to report on the proposed change, for which he saw no reason. The plan was explained by Curtis, rep., of New York, who contended soldiers sent to the prison for minor offenses were subjected to evil associations. The resolution, after some debate, was adopted—156 to 125. Debate on the currency bill being resumed, Beltzhoover, dem., of Pennsylvania, gave notice of an amendment. It proposes a section to enable the secretary of the treasury to fund the treasury notes, which may remain in circulation after August 1, 1895, which were issued under the act of February 25, 1869; July 11, 1862; March 3, 1863, and July 14, 1890, by issuing bonds to an amount not exceeding $500,000,000, to be redeemable at the pleasure of the United States after five years, and payable 25 years from date with interest at 3 per cent, payable semi-annually in gold. The bonds are to be of such denominations of not less than $50, as the secretary may determine, and to be sold at not less than par for gold or for treasury notes.

The members flocked around Sibley, dem., of Pennsylvania, when he began a characteristic address against the bill. He was applauded. He said: "If ever a rebuke was needed for one who has attempted to trample down the prerogatives of the people, it is needed for him who has attempted to usurp this entire government to himself. The time has come when there should be something more than brains, belly and brass, to this government." He referred to George III, and said it had been given out that any one who voted against the bill would incur the displeasure of the king. Four days after the repeal of the Sherman act members had told him they had been promised revenue collectorships if they would vote for repeal.

"The gentleman makes a very broad assertion," said Coombs, dem., of New York, and asked Sibley to mention names.

"I went three days ago to a member and asked him to allow me the privilege of calling him up here," replied Sibley. He said, "Mr. Sibley, you will place me in a bad position with my constituents," but "continued Sibley, "within 10 feet of me sits a man who heard him make the statement that he had been offered federal offices for his vote."

"But do you consider it fair," asked Coombs, with a perceptible tremor in his voice, "to make so grave a charge against the administration and not give the names and places in order to permit a defense?"

"Every man is the guardian of his own conscience," declared Sibley, "already padlocks have been on my lips too long, and I intend to throw them off."

"When were the padlocks put on your lips?" interjected Outhwaite, dem., of Ohio. There was great confusion and excitement following the question.

"I have not thrown them off before," continued Sibley, "because I hoped to see the administration redeem its promises, and I did not wish to utter a rebuke when there was hope of an honest performance."

Outhwaite had pushed forward and again uttered the question: "Who put padlocks on your lips?"

Sibley hesitated a moment, and with increased earnestness said: "Let me tell the gentleman, I am not talking today with men who believe in going to hell in a handcar instead of heaven supported by the truth. Let me tell him also that I am not addressing men who believe more in a bob-tail flush than a contrite heart."

A shout of applause and laughter greeted this statement.

Sibley proceeded to relate the experience of Dionysius, when he was again interrupted by Outhwaite.

"Was it Dionysius who put a padlock on your lips?"

Sibley made no reply and proceeded to address himself to the details of the pending bill.

Mr. Sibley was frequently interrupted by hisses, and when he demurred from answering he said his time would not be extended, although "not a man who spoke in favor of the gold trust of the world but was not given unlimited time." Pence of Colorado asked that he be permitted to finish, but Outhwaite objected. Sibley continued:

"We saw your distinguished executive after the election of 1892 his himself away for a recreation. Where on earth did he go? To the classic shores of Hog Island. The Bible says that, when they are set at liberty, each man will go to his own place. Where did he go? To Buzzard's bay. And ever since, the old ship of state has been bumping her nose into Hog island and foundering in the waters of Buzzard's bay, with prosperity but a cable's length away."

There was a panic being precipitated by the vultures of the banks, Mr. Sibley shouted, beside which the last panic was a gentle zephyr to a shrieking cyclone: He had figures, which he had prepared last June, and which, at the solicitation of friends, he had refrained from using, showing the banks and trusts could not pay 80 cents on the dollar. The administration had so carried out the declaration that the parity of all kinds of money would be maintained, that all other kinds but gold had become promissory notes for payment of the gold. Speaking of his democratic principles, Mr. Sibley said that if he got into what he supposed was a mahogany wagon and found it was veneered basswood being driven over a rocky road by an inexperienced driver, he would jump out, and would not care much were he landed. He drew a picturesque sketch of democrats sitting around banquet halls tonight worshipping at the shrine of Andrew Jackson and talking theories as different from his as the throne of hades is different from the fruit of the tree of life. And if Andrew Jackson's spirit were to appear, it would, he concluded, kick over the table and banish those apostles in disgust.

The Canal Bill.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 8.—There is going to be some impatience in the senate on the part of the champions of other bills over the prolonged debate on the Nicaragua canal bill. The advocates of the bankruptcy bill are growing especially solicitous. It is rumored today that Senator George, who has the bankruptcy bill in his keeping, would soon attempt to have it taken up, even if in doing so he would have to ask that the Nicaragua bill be unplaced. Mr. George pro-

EVERY HOUSEKEEPER SHOULD USE Cottolene

The new vegetable shortening. It meets the most exacting requirements, and is beside entirely free from the objectionable characteristics of lard, long known and long suffered. Now deliverance has come. With Cottolene, good cooking, good food and good health are all assured. But you must be sure you get COTTOLENE

And refuse all counterfeits

Beware of imitations made to sell on the merits and popularity of COTTOLENE. Refuse them all, and your grocer will then understand that you know exactly what you want. This will bring you satisfaction and save you disappointment.

nounced this rumor as without foundation, but admitted that he had been disappointed that the debate on the canal bill had continued for such a length of time. He said it had been understood when the order of consideration had been agreed on, that debate on the canal bill would not continue to exceed six days. Senator Morgan said, at the close of the session, that he did not think there would be a great many more speeches, and he believed two more days would bring the debate to a close if it could continue without interruption. Mr. George expects to encounter considerable opposition to the bankruptcy bill. It is understood that the advocates of the Terry bill will oppose the pending bill. The fight will be in a general way between the advocates of voluntary bankruptcy and those of involuntary bankruptcy.
