The incessant wasting of a consumptive can only be overcome by a powerful concentrated nourishment like Scott's Emulsion. If this wasting is checked and the system is supplied with strength to combat the disease there is hope of recovery.

Scott's Emulsion

of Cod-liver Oil, with Hypophosphites, does more to cure Consumption than any other known remedy. It is for all Affections of Throat and Lungs, Coughs, Colds, Bronchitis and Wasting. Pamphlet free. Scott & Bowne, N. Y. All Druggists. 50c. and $1.

First National of East Portland is Held Up.

A most desperate attempt to rob the First National bank of East Portland, on the corner of Union avenue and East Washington street, was made yesterday afternoon by Rev. J. C. Reed, formerly a Baptist minister on the East Side.

At 12:30 o'clock Teller E. T. Holgate was alone in the bank, when a man disguised with false whiskers, entered. Holgate recognized him as being Reed. The teller stepped from a desk where he had been writing in a book, to the counter, when Reed drew a bottle from his pocket containing a white substance, and said:

"This is nitro glycerine and there's enough of it to blow you and me to hell!"

Holgate being startled at the man's conduct, stepped back of the counter a few steps, upon which the robber pulled a revolver, which seemed of very large caliber to the teller at that moment, exclaiming:

"Hold up your hands, or I'll blow your brains out! Place your hands behind your back!"

The young teller obeyed the order, and Reed, passing through the directors' room, walked behind the counter, where he secured Holgate's hands with a heavy whip cord, and he blindfolded and gagged him, compelling him to crouch underneath the counter. Then the robber barred the Union avenue entrance with an iron bar, and began helping himself to the coin.

Holgate says: "He had a sack with him, and just as he dropped the first stack of $20 pieces into it Teller D. C. Southworth came along with a shotgun which he shoved through the glass door and shouted to Reed to hold up his hands. Reed cried out to him not to shoot, as he was unarmed, and was ready to surrender. The fellow had in the meantime taken off his false whiskers and disposed of his pistol, which looked much smaller to me subsequently than it originally did when it was shoved under my nose. A few minutes after Mr. Southworth came to my rescue. Reed was arrested and taken to the West Side police station."

Reed was seen at the central police station at 1 o'clock. He did not appear much agitated over his adventure. The police were having him in charge all the afternoon, so no story could be obtained from him.

MR. SOUTHWORTH'S STORY.

Holgate's rescuer, Teller D. C. Southworth, of the Citizen's bank, says that his attention first was attracted to the robber by his peculiar make-up, as he was walking down East Washington street toward the First National. He saw him stop in front of the bank, hesitating a moment or two and enter. He believed him to be a fakir, and for a few seconds thought no more of the man. He continued:

"The next time I looked over to the First National, I saw Holgate with his back to the counter and his hands crossed on it. Even then I supposed the stranger teaching Holgate a trick, but subsequently, when I observed the supposed fakir blindfold Holgate and shove him under the counter, I surmised that there was something wrong. I called our messenger, Ed Miller, into the bank from an adjoining room, put on my hat and, taking a shotgun out of the vault, I went across the street. I first looked into the south window of the bank and saw the robber piling gold into a sack. As soon as he observed me, he fell behind the counter on his hands. I cried to him to hold up his hands and stand quiet or I would fire at him. The fellow supplicated me not to shoot, claiming to be unarmed. There was a stranger standing in front of the bank, who must have seen all that was passing within. I asked him to hurry for an officer, but the fellow remained there a few moments longer with an idiotic leer, but disappeared as the crowd gathered.

"I jumped to the front door, and, being unable to gain an entrance, I shoved my gun through the glass, keeping my man covered with it. In the crowd that had assembled at this time was M. D. George, whom I requested to get an officer, and in a short time thereafter we had Mr. Reed where he could do no more harm."

O. W. O. Hardman, Sheriff of Tyler Co., W. Va., appreciates a good thing and does not hesitate to say so. He was almost prostrated with a cold when he procured a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. He says: "It gave me prompt relief. I find it to be an invaluable remedy for coughs and colds." For sale by Blakeley & Houghton, Druggists.

"Alpine Heights!" exclaimed a passenger on a Northwestern suburban train, looking out of the window and reading the inscription on a huge sign-board erected by a firm of enterprising real estate agents. "I don't see anything that looks like Alpine Heights around here." "You don't?" said the passenger on the seat in front. "What do you call those piles of lumber over there?"—Chicago Tribune.

Exposure to rough weather, dampness, extreme cold, etc., is apt to bring on an attack of rheumatism or neuralgia; chapped hands and face, cracked lips and violent itching of the skin also owe their origin to cold weather. Dr. McLean's Volcanic Oil Liniment should be kept on hand at all times for immediate application when troubles of this nature appear. It is a sovereign remedy. 25c, 50c and $1.00 per bottle.

Mistress (finding visitor in kitchen)—Who is this Mary? Mary (confused)—My brother, m'm. Mistress (suspiciously)—You're not much alike. Mary (stammering apologetically)—We were, m'm but he's just had his beard shaved off, and that makes him look quite different, m'm.—Tit-Bits.

Many stubborn and aggravating cases of rheumatism that were believed to be incurable and accepted as life legacies, have yielded to Chamberlain's Pain Balm, much to the surprise and gratification of the sufferers. One application will relieve the pain and suffering and its continued use insures an effectual cure. For sale by Blakeley & Houghton Druggists.

Telephone girl—I want to look at some black kid gloves. Saleslady—What number, please! Telephone girl (surprised)—Why, how did you know I worked there?—Somerville Journal.

A SUSCEPTIBLE INDIAN.

Mr. Lo Was Deeply Impressed by a White Woman's Picture.

Mr. Cremony, in his "Life Among the Apaches," gives an entertaining account of a lady's man with whom he once enjoyed an interview. "A tall, strong, well-made and handsome young dandy," he calls him; strutting about with an air of very superior consequence, displaying his colossal proportions, his splendid leopard-skin saddle, quiver, leggings and the like.

After awhile Sait-jah came swaggering toward me, and said, in broken Spanish: "Our chief says you great medicine; he says your pistol fires six times without reloading; he says you bring the trees which are afar off close to the eye, so you can count the leaves; he says your guns reach a great way and never miss; he says a great many other wonderful things, which I cannot believe. You have bewitched him."

Drawing a six-shooter from my belt, I pointed out a tree about seventy-five yards distant, and began firing rapidly. Each shot struck the tree, and blazed off large fragments of the bark.

Sait-jah was astonished, and made no attempt to conceal the fact; but his admiration broke into emphatic expression when he witnessed the precision and reach of our Sharp's rifles, and the rapidity with which they could be loaded and fired. His pride had evidently received a heavy fall, and his lofty bearing was toned down many degrees.

In my possession was the miniature of a young lady, whose graces of person, cultivated mind and amiable disposition rendered her one of the most lovable of Boston's fairest daughters.

Sait-jah happened to see this picture, and asked permission to take a good look at the pleasant features. The miniature was placed in his hand, and his eyes seemed to devour its expressive lineaments. Throughout the remainder of the day he bored me with frequent requests for another look, and the next morning, as soon as the camp was astir, he offered me his bow, arrows and splendid leopard-skin for the picture.

The offer being refused, he added his horse, and whatever other property he might have; then, finding me deaf to his entreaties, he took one long, last look, vaulted on his horse, set off at full speed, and rapidly disappeared in the distance.

A New Eldorado.

The newest of western mining camps, the Cochiti camp, in New Mexico, lies near the ancient Indian village of that name on the west bank of the Rio Grande, southwest from Santa Fe. The mines lie in ledges which cross at right angles the walls of three canyons, the Cochiti, the Pino and the Peralta. Some of the ores already taken out there are very rich, and, if the claims as to their abundance are verified in the continued working, Cochiti will prove one of the great gold-bearing districts of the United States. At the mouth of the Pino, the central canyon of the three, the humming, brand-new town of Allerton is situated. Two smaller town sites, Kent City and Eagle, have been laid off, about six miles to the east and to the west, respectively. A few frame and more log houses are interspersed among the tents which constitute the greater part of the residence and business structures of the camp, in which about two thousand people abide. Saloons and gambling and dance houses are plentiful and busy, and even the "old timer," with memories of Deadwood and Leadville, admits that the Cochiti has generally the symptoms of a booming camp.
