BRIEF MENTION.

Leaves From the Notebook of Chronicle Reporters.

The divorce case of Jacobsen vs Jacobson was up before Judge Bradshaw in chambers.

Al Bettingen has turned farmer, and today sent a load of seed wheat out to his ranch on 3-Mile this morning.

The concert and entertainment to be given in the M. E. church Wednesday, March 6th, will be one of the best ever given here, as all of the best musical talent will take part.

Harmon lodge, No. 4, will give its annual entertainment at the Baptist church this evening. There will be a military drill by a class of young ladies, and a good night drill by the infant class.

Rev. L. Grey of Oregon City, will preach next Sunday, at 10:30 a. m., in the Lutheran chapel on Ninth street. In the evening, at 7:30, he preaches in English. All friends of the Lutheran church especially also the Scandinavians, are cordially invited.

The Regulator since she has been overhauled is by long odds the handsomest and the most tastily furnished, boat on the waters of any portion of the upper Columbia. She is carrying lots of freight too, and the opening of the season indicates a remarkably prosperous one.

Pease & Mays are having the back portion of their immense store remodeled. The office is being moved, new windows cut through the back wall and a dozen other minor improvements made. When it is completed, and the big stock now on the way is in, it will be one of the very finest stores in Eastern Oregon.

The East End sidewalks have been sprinkled with carbolic acid and other mixtures that make a smell the like whereof is not smelled every day. Moody, Filloon and Saltmarsh this morning had a man with a sprinkling pot scattering sheep-dip around their places of business, reasoning that as there must be a scab in smallpox, everything that would prevent scab would therefore prevent smallpox.

The earthquake Monday morning seemed to be general throughout the Northwest. The reason that it was not more generally noted is the hour at which it occurred, that is about 4:45.

We know of no one here who observed it, but at Hood River several persons felt it. Mr. John Parker, of that place, describes it as two distinct shocks, the first he says made him think for a moment that some one was rattling the front door and trying to get in. This lasted long enough for a person to have gone down stairs and out of the house. The second shock was both shorter and lighter.

Plenty of Sturgeon.

The middle Columbia is just now furnishing a large amount of sturgeon for the Eastern markets. This once despised shark is now selling at three or four times as much per pound as the once royal, but now deposed, chinook. Thousands of pounds are sent to Portland on the Regulator every day, from down river points, and some of the fishermen are making from $30 to as high as $90 per day. These rubber-nosed sharks (the fish, not the fishermen) are put in refrigerator cars and shipped East, and in passing through the bad lands of Montana, are changed in their character, arriving in New York as halibut, or sea bass, just as the market happens to demand. This versatility on the part of the sturgeon is what gives it a greater value than the red fleshed salmon, which cannot travel under an alias.

Council Meeting.

A special meeting of the city council was held at the recorder's office last night for the purpose of taking steps to prevent the spread of smallpox. The full council was present, with the exception of the mayor. Councilman Nolan was elected chairman pro tem. It was ordered that the persons in the Obarr building, where the patient is, be removed with their beds and bedding to the pest-house. On motion the committee on health and police was given full power to act in all matters necessary to prevent the spread of the disease and protect the public health. On motion adjourned.

They Won't Have It.

Dufur has the smallpox scare pretty badly. Mr. Peabody, who was working at the Obarr house the day the case of smallpox was discovered, went home to Dufur, and in consequence when the citizens there found that he had been exposed, they quarantined him and his family. This was a wise precautionary measure, but there is little probability of Mr. Peabody being infected. The disease is contagious, it is true, before the eruptive stage, but only so in a very slight degree. However, a ten-days quarantine, while inconvenient to Mr. Peabody, will soon pass away, and then the community will feel safe.

When Baby was sick, we gave her Castoria.
When she was a Child, she cried for Castoria.
When she became Miss, she clung to Castoria.
When she had Children, she gave them Castoria.

A Smallpox Scare.

There is naturally considerable excitement over a case of smallpox being in the city, and with it much unreasoning and unreasonable fear. Rumor, the forked-tongued old jade, has been harking on her dogs, until the 1001 tales of Scheherazade are a mere bagatelle. In some portions of the city, according to the tales, there are six new cases of malignant, confluent smallpox; everybody has been exposed, and by tomorrow night one-half the town will be engaged in burying the other half.

The simple truth is, there is one case of smallpox, and in the same building on the lower floor, the patient being upstairs, are six other persons, who will be removed tonight to the pest house. So far as known, there has been no one exposed since the case was known to be smallpox, and of those exposed before there is little or no danger of their taking it. The six persons in quarantine have all been vaccinated, and with proper care there is no need of their being another case.

People forget that the smallpox exists nearly all the time. Puget Sound has been having it in almost continually for the past six months. They also forget that science has made wonderful strides of late years, and that the smallpox is no longer a disease the end of which is death. Scarlet fever and diphtheria are infinitely more deadly, and the mild-mannered gripe more dangerous. We do not believe there will be another case of it; but in the meantime the most rigid quarantine should be enforced, and every precaution taken to not only prevent its spread, but to stamp it out. At the same time let our people quit trying to scare each other to death, and in a few days the whole matter will be settled.

Discussing the Matter.

A number of the citizens living on the bluff and especially those who live within a few blocks of the pest house, met the committee on police and health, at the council chambers this afternoon. They were disposed to protest against having the pest house used by those now quarantined in the Obarr house. Dr. Eshelman, chairman of the committee, presided and professional opinions were given by Drs. Doane, Sutherland and Shackelford concerning the contagiousness of smallpox. They all agree that a distance of twenty feet is sufficient to render one safe from contagion, that the disease is not disseminated through the air, but its germs may be carried in clothing, etc. They were unanimous in stating that the use of the pest house, which is more than 100 feet from any building could not in any way jeopardize the health of anyone. It is quite probable they say, that none of the quarantined persons have the disease.

The meeting had not adjourned at this writing, but it is a fair presumption that the citizens on the hill will make no further objection to the pest house being used for the purposes for which it was built.

"I guess my hat's my own! I paid for it," snapped the young woman at the matinee, turning round and addressing the two men who were making audible remarks about her towering head-dress; "and I paid for my seat, too." "But you didn't pay for all the space between your seat and the ceiling, my dear young lady," mildly observed the elder of the two men.—Chicago Tribune.
