CONCERNING CITIZENSHIP.

The wild howl made by some of our citizens for the annexation of Hawaii is made without taking the results of that movement into consideration. The population of the islands is about 90,000, of whom 2,000 are white, 15,000 Chinese, 12,000 Japanese, 34,000 Kanakas, and 6,000 mixed breeds. Does the United States need this heterogeneous population added to its citizens? We think not. Our free institutions are threatened now from our criminal carelessness in making citizens of foreigners who are not capable of understanding the principles upon which free governments rest, or appreciating liberty. We made a serious mistake when we put the ballot into the hands of the negro almost as soon as his shackles were broken, and before he was given an opportunity to learn the power for good or evil that rested in the right to vote. The same mistake was made before this in regard to certain classes of foreigners, who were as gullible of knowledge necessary to vote intelligently as the negro.

We have continued, and still continue this mistaken policy, founded on the sentiment that this country is an "asylum for the oppressed," until the right to vote, to have something to say in regard to the management of the country's affairs, is a privilege that is valueless to the intelligent citizen. We have now voters enough whose actions can be controlled for a very small pecuniary consideration, that politics has largely, in great cities especially, become a question of money, the largest sack carrying the day. Nor have we found the limit yet. Only a few days ago the Umatilla Indians were declared by our courts to be citizens of the United States. They cannot talk English; they have no idea of government, except the crude and savage form of tribal fealty, and their idea of liberty is the right to do as they please, without regard to the rights of others. The toga of citizenship had not been fairly settled upon their shoulders when the United States troops had to be called out to keep them from defying the government which made them citizens. The dispatches yesterday gravely tell us in glowing headlines that the "Umatillas show no sign of going on the warpath;" that that celebrated American citizen, "No Shirt" is in danger of his life from "his fellow citizens," who are just as shirtless, or shiftless, as himself. The lines were loose enough before, but now all barriers are down. The be-draped citizens of Umatilla, fresh from their wick-o-ups, hand-painted, be-greased and be-blanketed; ignorant of civilization; without an idea of government; without education; whose idea of freedom is the right to get drunk, and whose understanding of liberty is the privilege of killing their enemies, are the latest voting contingent, and let us hope the last.

We have enough of this kind of citizens, and we have no need of Hawaii, with its bias-eyed Mongolians, its leprous natives, and the olla podrida resulting from the mingling of all. Inordinate greed to possess a portion of the lands of the Umatillas caused the addition to our voting population of "No Shirt" et al, because we could not get the land without also taking its people. The same thing will occur if we annex Hawaii, and it is better to do without the islands than to annex the population.

Judge Bellinger has listened patiently for several days to arguments in the matter of the receivers for the Short Line and O. R. & N., arguments which if reported correctly in the papers, were about the flattest and weakest, for the price, ever made out of the justice court of Scappoose precinct. The judge, after digesting the arguments, only to be afflicted with mental flatulency, decided there was nothing to decide, and so decided to leave things just as they were. United States Senator Thurston, who has a reputation for facetiousness—in the East—convulsed the court, bar and audience during the course of the argument, by a coruscation of Nebraska humor. He rose to his feet, and pointing the index finger of his full hand at the attorneys on the other side, while his jocund face gave scintillations of the jest unborn, but struggling within him, he turned the faucet of his pent-up mirth on full head, and doubled his hearers up like a jack-knife, or a pocket rule, or a democratic majority, or a jack-rabbit, or any other loose-jointed thing, with the side-splitting remark that the lawyers of the "wild west were wild and woolly." And then he smiled at himself while he took out his memorandum book and jotted down a "mem," to charge the company $1000 additional—for a joke.

The Walla Walla Statesman says "the state of Washington needs a new constitution." As the present constitution is hardly old enough to be weaned, it does not seem possible that another can be needed. Now, here in Oregon we are getting along in the same bib and tucker the good old pioneers made when the population of the state was not much larger than that of the city where the Statesman is published. The garment is small, consisting principally of bib, and as we have grown from infancy to whiskerdom, it necessarily follows that considerable of our anatomy is exposed at times, for the reason that in attempting to cover one part some other is exposed.

The branch asylum case will do for an illustration. In this the court is asked to decide that the constitution is unconstitutional, and that if it is not so, that the supreme court find a way to get around it. We want to see the asylum built in Eastern Oregon, but still we believe that doing so will uncover some parts of the venerable old state will be left bare.

The Salem Statesman asks the questions "What is Salem's greatest need?" and "How shall it be attained?" We do not know whether our contemporary wants only the friendly advice of the citizens of the city, or some real good sound logic from outside sources. We suggest that she hustle for what she wants, and if she gets that she will have the earth, and then she won't need anything.

The Discovery Saved His Life.

Mr. G. Caillouette, druggist, Beaverville, Ill., says: "To Dr. King's New Discovery I owe my life. Was taken with La Grippe and tried all the physicians for miles about, but of no avail, and was given up and told I could not live. Having Dr. King's New Discovery in my store, I sent for a bottle and began its use, and from the first dose began to get better, and after using three bottles was up and a'out again. It is worth its weight in gold. We won't keep store or house without it." Get a free trial at Snipes & Kinersly's.

The Washington legislature will cease from troubling at midnight tonight. The doxology will be heard with great and fervent thankfulness by the people of our sister state, even though they are somewhat used to the Kansas style of politics.

 a vigorous body and robust strength follow good health. But all fail when the vital powers are weakened. Nervous debility and loss of manly power result from bad habits, contracted by being through ignorance of their ruinous consequences. Low spirits, melancholia, impaired memory, morose or irritable temper, fear of impending calamity and a thousand and one derangements of body and mind, result from such pernicious practices. All these are permanently cured by improved methods of treatment without the patient leaving home.
 A medical treatise written in plain but chaste language, treating of the nature, symptoms and curability of such diseases, is sent securely sealed in a plain envelope, on receipt of this notice, with ten cents in stamps, for postage. Address, WORLD'S DISPENSARY MEDICAL ASSOCIATION, Buffalo, N. Y.
