A HOME MARKET.

The building up of a market for our home manufactures is a problem to be worked out in this state. So far but little has been done in this line. Many establishments have been started over the state, but few of them show evidence of being able to compete for the trade of this coast. The great cause of this lack of support in the home trade is that their goods are not known outside of the town in which they are made, while the Eastern manufacturers leave nothing undone to constantly keep the merits of their goods before the people. The result being that the home article is crowded out for the reason that people will buy only known articles. This same condition appears to prevail in California, and on this subject the San Francisco Call has the following to say:

When the manufacturers of California come to consider in detail the problem of finding at home a market for their goods they must not overlook the fundamental truth that there can never be a market for goods that are not known to the consumer. Local patriotism and enlightened public sentiment can do much to foster, encourage and support California industries, but the people must first know that the industries exist. The Californian most loyal to California products can hardly be expected to order California goods if he does not know that there are any such goods.

The trade journals of California show a rich array of Eastern advertising, but a very scant amount of advertising by California producers. The merchant must of necessity purchase those things that are advertised, for he does not know of the others, nor do his customers. In this way the Eastern dealers get the Pacific coast market, not because Pacific coast people prefer Eastern goods, but because they have no choice. The proposition is too plain to require extended argument. The simplest statement of the case is sufficient. No possible patriotism, no possible public sentiment, can get people to buy goods they never heard of. Our manufacturers must support their trade journals. They must advertise.

DOES NOT SUIT GRESHAM.

Secretary Gresham has asked the Hawaiian government to recall Minister Thurston. The secretary makes no charges against Thurston, in connection with the newspaper criticism of himself, but it is easily seen that the secretary is deeply offended, and that he connects Mr. Thurston with the objectionable criticism. Gresham is decidedly touchy concerning anybody interfering with what he considers his prerogatives, yet at the same time he is the most middle-some old grandmammy of a secretary of state since we have owned a flag.

Of course Thurston will be recalled because nothing will have to be proved against him. It is sufficient to know that his presence is not pleasant to the secretary, to compel his government to recall him. Thurston loses a job by not having a stronger pull on the trigger of his tongue, and yet his conduct looked at from any other than the diplomatic standpoint, is not at all reprehensible. If he said what it is said he said, then he said nothing but what every intelligent American has already said, or at least thought.

THE WOOL OUTLOOK.

The American Wool and Cotton Reporter, published at Boston, which is the American wool market, says:

"The reported strength of markets abroad has not yet been reflected in any appreciable way here. Prices, though not notably higher, certainly are steadier, and although trade has ruled very quiet, manufacturers found it impossible to obtain concessions in value from those current a week ago. Wool is low in comparison with other staple articles, and is lower here than anywhere else. Stocks of domestic wool here are not large and yet there appears to be enough to meet the demand, which is not urgent. The business of the past week has been of a retail character, very few good lots having been moved. The aggregate of transactions is even less than that of last week. Holders of wool are in some quarters quite firm in their views, and a case is cited where a manufacturer came in the market and made some offers, none of which were accepted by dealers. It is believed even by those who had been looking for a further decline in values that wool has reached a point where the bottom can be felt, and that any further changes in values will be upward rather than downward."

The dispatches today show that a general snow storm is paying its respects to Missouri, Illinois, Indiana and extending into Virginia. At Peoria the snow is drifted to a depth of four feet and at Columbus the storm is said to be the worst experienced there in years. At Cape Charles, Virginia, five inches of snow fell. After all the experience with cold waves that have swept the country east of the Rockies, from the lakes to the gulf, the Pacific coast seems to be the only reliable summer resort. The peach trees are in bloom here, and the ground will soon be white with orchard blossoms. Oregon, the land where blizzards never blow, where drouths never come, and where crops never fail, is the banner state of the union.
