SPRAY NO. 1.

Winter Spray for San Jose Scale and Curl Leaf of the Peach.
Lime, unslacked.....30 lbs
Sulphur, powdered.....20 lbs
Salt, Liverpool.....15 lbs

The above is a very efficient remedy for the San Jose Scale and Curl Leaf of the Peach, and is an excellent fertilizer for the trees. It not only destroys the scale and prevents the spread of the curl leaf, but removes all lichens and keeps the bark soft.

In the case of curl leaf, the greatest good will result from the early spraying, as it prevents to a large degree the dormant spores of this parasitic fungus coming to life, and destroys any that may have started.

DIRECTIONS.

To be most successful, this spray should be applied just before the buds swell in the spring. It can be used at this time stronger than later, and should be thrown upon the trees when it is warm.

Use for winter spraying, 1 pound to 2 gallons of water; for summer work use 1 pound to 8 gallons of water. Maier & Benton, sole agents, The Dalles, Or.

BRIEF MENTION.

Leaves From the Notebook of Chronicle Reporters.

The April showers are here all right, and so are the May flowers.

C. L. Gilbert and S. J. La France of Hood River came up on the afternoon train.

Rudolph Frank won the horse raffled by Julius Wiley, the winning throw being 46. He has an elegant little horse and is well pleased with his good fortune.

Under the new time table the local passenger arrives at 12:15, departs at 2:15. The train will be run on Sundays. The morning west bound passenger leaves at 3:15.

The gathering of bright ideas and pleasing color combinations, in the new spring styles of novelty dress fabrics, on display at A. M. Williams & Co., is peerless.

A. C. Mowrey, who is cutting piles for Nick Clinton at Stella, writes that the snow is so heavy in the woods on that side of the river that it is impossible to do much timber cutting at present.

The apricot trees in Pendleton are already in blossom and the peach buds are about to burst. Within a few days the orchards should be in bloom, providing the good weather continues.

Mrs. Le Ballister will display her spring stock of millinery next Tuesday and Wednesday. She has just received a fine stock of the very latest shapes and the most popular and fashionable shades in trimmings. A cordial invitation is extended to the ladies to call and inspect the selections.

Constable Urquhart arrived from Antelope Tuesday night. He made a business trip through the county serving a job-lot of summons in a lot of cases in Justice Davis' court, the actions being brought to recover on notes given for insurance. He tells us there was quite a snowstorm Friday in the country between Bake Oven and Antelope, snow falling to a depth of two inches.

There are quite a number of running horses in training at the race tracks for the meeting at Portland in June, and for the other events of the circuit. Mr. Chas. Fortune's stable contains the following: The bay mare Volta, sorrel horse, Deschutes, and bay horse, Jim Crow. Andy Allen has the bay horse, Nehalem, two-year-olds by Frank Hastings, the grey horse, Good Friday, and two green ones.

Mrs. Mary Kissling, who is postmistress at Willard, not only conducts a farm and store, but has reared a fine family; and today paid out of her earnings $600 to the Jarvis-Conklin Mortgage Co., which leaves her home free from debt. Mrs. Kissling has also been active in organizing the new Congregational church at Willard and today was passing around the subscription paper for the erection of a new church to cost not over $1,000.—Salem Journal.

A bay team belonging to the Winans Bros. and engaged in hauling a wagon loaded with lumber, took it into their heads this morning to take a run. They started from some place in the East End and came down Second street as though Jehu himself was urging them. Just in front of Mays & Crowe's something deflected them from their course and unlike the populists, they left the middle of the road. The lumber had, most of it, been disposed of regardless of cost, on the way down, and the outfit was running in ballast. When their course was changed they were unable to make the circle and turn up Federal street, so they compromised by running into the dead wall of the Max Vogt building, and coming to a full stop. The damage was light.

Last Night's Play.

"Nevada, or The Lost Mine" drew one of the largest audiences ever gathered in The Dalles. The house was well filled, and had it not been that the gripe has dozens of victims in the city that kept other dozens from attending, there would not have been standing room. The Dalles is justly proud of its local dramatic club, and never fails to show its appreciation of its home talent. The stage was well fitted up and the play, which is interesting from first to last, ran smoothly throughout. It is difficult to comment upon the individual characters, for we feel that did we say all the words of praise the acting deserved, that we would be charged with dealing in flattery, yet we cannot forego a brief review of the characters.

The play hinges upon "Nevada," an old miner, who, after discovering a rich gold mine, is struck on the head by a rock falling from the roof of the tunnel, and although he gets back to camp, he is mentally deranged, and cannot again find his mine. On this foundation is built the balance of the story. "Nevada's" wife came from the East to seek him, but reaching the cabin of "Vermont," an old miner, dies, leaving with him her little girl, who grows up the pride of the camp, is sent off to school by "Vermont," returns, bringing her teacher, "Miss Agnes Fairlee," with her. "Moselle," the wife, falls in love with "Dandy Dick," a young miner, who left home under a cloud, and "Agnes Fairlee" goes "gone" on "Tom Carew." "Silas Steele," a missionary of health, traveling for "Busted's Balm," turns out to be a son of "Vermont," and with "Jube," a negro, and "Win Kye," a Chinaman, assists in uncovering the villainies of "Jerden," the detective, who is the heavy villain of the play. These with "Mother Merton," who was a mother to "Moselle," complete the cast of characters.

The part of "Nevada" was taken by Mr. Harry Lonsdale and taken well, though it was the most difficult part of the play. Mr. Nolan as "Vermont" showed a thorough understanding of the character, and looked and acted the old-time miner to perfection. "Tom Carew" was another difficult part that was well taken by Mr. N. Sinnott, and "Dandy Dick," by R. Sinnott, was equally well played. "Silas Steele" was the easiest part of the whole play, that is, it was easiest to Johnny Hampshire, to whom all parts are easy. Mr. Fred Wilson had the thankless part of the play, that of the black-bearded villain, and as nine-tenths of the audience felt like getting up on stage and kicking him, it is fair to presume that he acted his part well enough. Mr. Hartnett, the negro miner, and Charley Heppner as "Win Kye," the ubiquitous Chinaman, were always around at the right time to discover just the things necessary to the unfolding of the plot. The latter gave a Chinese song that was heartily encored. We have forborne mentioning the ladies who took part in the play until last, because the best of a feast, literary or otherwise, comes in the dessert? Mrs. G. C. Blakeley as "Mother Merton," had but little to do, but that little was done thoroughly. Miss Rose Michell made a charming little "Moselle," and won a warm spot in the hearts of the audience at once, which she held to the last; and Miss Myrtle Michell took the part of "Agnes Fairlee" in fine shape.

The play was a success in every way, yielding, besides the two hours' pleasure, the sum of $172.75 gross. The worst part of the play was, that while the larger portion of the audience was present at 8 o'clock, at which time the curtain was supposed to raise, there were others who came straggling in until 8:40.

The music was furnished by the Orchestral Union, and that leaves nothing more to be said on that score, except that each number brought forth hearty applause.

The second scene, representing the interior of a log cabin, was the handiwork of the artist, Mr. Horne, and it was a realistic bit of work, too.

When Baby was sick, we gave her Castoria.
When she was a Child, she cried for Castoria.
When she became Miss, she clung to Castoria.
When she had Children, she gave them Castoria.
