WOOLEN MILL NEEDED.

The wool clip for 1895 has been sold for the most part, and the larger portion of it has been shipped away from our warehouses. With it went from three to four million pounds of grease and good Oregon dirt. For the shipping of that grease and dirt to Boston we have paid from $28,000 to $30,000 to the transportation companies. If a cleansing establishment could be paid one-half of what it would save on freight and could have for one season the cleansing of the entire clip marketed at this place, it would pay for its plant and have something left, unless a plant would cost more than we suppose.

We ship our wool to New England and the middle states, pay the freight on it and ship the manufactured goods back, paying another tribute to transportation companies, and usually paying, in addition to freights, a profit to the jobber; nevertheless we have here all the conditions requisite to the cleansing, weaving and manufacturing. The Dalles should have these industries; who can suggest the way to get them?

COUNTY INDEBTEDNESS SHOULD BE FUNDED.

There probably has never before been a time when there has been so much idle capital seeking safe investments in Wasco county as at present. The low price of wool and wheat during the past two years has withdrawn much capital heretofore invested in these industries. The funding of the debt of the city has released a considerable amount and some other local causes have tended to release money from employment. Had the county followed the example of the city and funded its debt, as it might have done by act of the legislature, there would have been no trouble in placing its bonds among local capitalists to as equally good advantage as did Dalles City, thereby saving about $2000 per annum to the taxpayers. If Wasco county is properly represented in the next legislature this will be done.

Stanford University is in a hard row of stumps. It is being prodded by the ministers of Chicago as well as the Oregonian. Mrs. Stanford's ideas upon the liquor question are not approved by the clergy and the free silver notions of one of its professors is distasteful to the Oregonian; so its days are numbered. Too much silver and too much brandy are dangerous to the youthful and the ignorant, always, and this young college will have to quit its brandy and its silver, or shut up shop; otherwise the Oregonian and the other preachers will do it up.

The great debate in Chicago promises to be one of the notable meets of recent years. The champions of the two financial beliefs have put forth their gladiators and the combat is to be a merciless one. Every word the two men utter will be read the world over and the good that results will be lasting. The only danger in such a contest is that the debaters will be prone to make personal thrusts and wander from the main issue into sallies of wit and sarcasm at one another's expense. Such proceedings would serve to take away what influence the debate would otherwise possess.

The loose rock in our streets remain where they were some weeks ago, an annoyance to people driving and riding and a menace to bicyclers and bicycles. Can't our combined marshal and street commissioner round up enough hobs to clear these away? Mr. Officer with the combination name, please confer this great boon upon a long suffering community and we will applaud to the echo.

In the United States there are now two classes only; the nobility, composed of all those who earn their bread by honest toil, and the tramps, composed of those who live without working. We had a third class, composed of agitators, but they have either joined one or the other of the two classes or gone to jail; the country had no place for them.

The American people will undergo more discomfort to find comfort than one unacquainted with them would suspect. Just consider the campers along the Columbia this chilly weather trying to be comfortable about a camp fire.

We are almost happy that we can't afford to go camping.

The "horrid" bloomers are no where at this season of the year; just go to the beach and look at the bathing suits. But who was ever so bold as to suggest that the ordinary bathing suits are immodest.

A Sale For Over $1,200 Today.

On the courthouse steps today Deputy Sheriff Kelly offered for sale the two farms known as the old Lair Hill and W. H. Wilson places, on Mill creek. The sale was a sheriff's one and done in pursuance of decrees in the cases of J. C. Flanders vs. O. D. Taylor, Sarah K. Taylor, J. A. Johnson, Caroline Breese, John Berger, T. C. Mitchell, and state of Oregon as trustee for the common school fund of Wasco county. The amount of the judgment, with interest, against the two places was $8986.02 and it was not expected that there would be much active bidding, but in this the calculations were wrong. J. C. Flanders bid $4648.48 for the Wilson place and $4801.54 for the Hill farm. C. W. Dietzel and Mr. Wilson, as attorney for Jos. A. Johnson, joined in the bidding which became quite brisk. The final bid for Mr. Johnson was the highest and he became the purchaser of both places. The Wilson farm selling for $8500 and the Hill place for $6236. The money was ready in French & Co.'s bank to make the payments and the matter soon adjusted, satisfying the Flanders judgment.

These two farms are among the best fruit lands in Wasco county and well improved. The price paid today represents less than one-half their real value. Mr. Taylor has been the owner of both farms for several years. This sale is one of the largest ever held by the sheriff.
