THE TRANSPORTATION ON THE UPPER COLUMBIA.

The press of Puget sound have suggested that the recent meeting between Paul Mohr and his associates with W. D. Tyler, manager of the Hunt system, may mean a transportation line down the Columbia paralleling the O. R. & N. road. The friends of Paul Mohr here predict that the portage from Celilo to North Dalles will be completed as soon as the canal and locks at the Cascades are opened to navigation and that steamers will then be placed on the upper river by that company. If there is anything in the suggestion that the Columbia Navigation Company, generally known as the Mohr Company, and the Hunt system have formed an alliance it will mean much to the producers of the upper Columbia, as well as to the O. R. & N. Co.

The D. P. & A. N. Co. have revolutionized the transportation business between this city and Portland, with the aid of the state portage railroad. It will cost little more to portage thirteen miles that it does the half mile at the Cascades, the handling of freight being no more. Opponents of the state portage scheme predicted that it would be of no use because the broaking of bulk twice would make it expensive and impracticable to ship freight over the road. The experiment was tried and its success has been far greater than its most enthusiastic supporters predicted. Both passenger and freight rates have been decreased almost 100 per cent. There is no reason why the same result cannot be attained for all the country tributary to the Columbia above Celilo, provided the same careful management is exercised as in the case of the D. P. & A. N. Co. It is safe to say that there never has been on the Columbia a more popular line than this one and its great success is due to the fact that its managers have had in mind the welfare of its patrons even more than its own financial success.

With the Hunt system, a popular and well managed line of boats on the upper river, and the Paul Mohr portage road working together, the whole upper country will become independent of the railroads and a new era for the producers of the Inland Empire will be inaugurated.

THE INDIAN OUTBREAK.

The wicked flea where no man pursueth; and thus it proves with the latest Indian "outbreak." The alleged massacre proves to be almost without foundation. The community had repeated one of those wrongs which constitute the great blot upon the civilization of this country, and when the Indians left their reservations the community fled and spread far and wide the alarm of another Indian outbreak.

Indian character is anything but admirable, and possibly any attempt to make law abiding and useful citizens of them is as hopeless as to make a shepherd dog of a coyote; nevertheless were their characters entirely different the treatment they have received at the hands of Indian agents and settlers would have driven them away from instead of winning them to the civilization of the white man. Every one familiar with the Indian policy of the government, if our treatment of them can be called a policy, knows that there is more truth than fiction in Helen Hunt Jackson's touching and beautiful story, Ramona; the picture as drawn by Miss Jackson, is, no doubt, highly colored, but it is nevertheless essentially true. And we have no doubt the present trouble, if there is any serious trouble, is due to the blundering of our officiousness or stupid injustice on the part of some fool justice of the peace or constable.

WASCO'S FRUIT.

The fruit industry about The Dalles is showing itself; a carload of peach plums a day is a large amount of one variety of fruit; but the supply is not exhausted; no finer plums are produced on the face of the earth, and Wasco county could produce enough to supply the world. Peaches are now ripening and the crop is a very large one. Apricots, pears, prunes and apples will soon be ready and will supply the large stream of fruit already started toward the eastern states. Our melon fields will, in a few days, send car load lots both east and west.

Skill, care and industry will yet make our fruit lands of great value. The larger the supply, the better will be the facilities for marketing.

There are several sections of sidewalk which need condemning badly; the city has little use for a damage suit just now, and it will be much easier to fight a delinquent property owner in a forum of our own choosing than a lawsuit for damages by some one maimed for life before the circuit court.

The Indian outbreak is of some utility; like a false fire alarm it gets out the machinery and men held and hired to protect us and gives a drill with which no dress parade can compare. There is no prospect of a labor riot this summer, hence the Indian scare comes handy.

Wheat made another advance Saturday of 2 1/2 cents in the right direction. If those gamblers in Chicago can keep up the game at the present pitch for about three months longer, Oregon will be in at the finish and make a killing.

When the Note Falls Due.

You may say that life is trouble
 When the clouds are in the blue,
 But a fellow finds it double
 When the Note Falls Due.

Sorrow's nothing but a bubble
 That will vanish from the view,
 But it's trouble, trouble, trouble,
 When the Note Falls Due.

And the corn it goes to stubble,
 And the rose, it withers, too,
 And it's trouble, trouble, trouble,
 When the Note Falls Due.

Go it single file or double,
 There'll be work enough for you
 In a living world of trouble,
 When the Note Falls Due.

—Atlanta Constitution.

Moored in the creek back of the Cosmopolitan lies a flat bottomed, scow built boat, which has had a rather eventful journey. It was built last April by W. L. Le Compt, with three companions and has come the entire distance from Lewiston to The Dalles down the treacherous currents and through the rapids of the Snake and Columbia rivers. Four men made the journey without a mishap. They reached the messhouse, May 2d and there the boat remained till last Saturday, when it was brought through the rapids known as the dalles. The men say they went over the falls at Tumwater and at the dalles without any touch of fear and the boat passed by rocks and whirls without striking any obstacle. The trip was exciting the entire distance. The party stopped at Riparia, Pasco, Umatilla and Arlington.

BORN.
