ABOUT WOOL.

A circular issued July 15th by the well known wool house of Justice, Bateman & Co., presents timely information about supply, consumption and prices of wool. The wool clip of the United States in 1891 was 207,000,000 pounds. It rose to 330,000,000 in 1892, and to 384,000,000 in 1893. Since then it has decreased, and this year it was but 204,000,000 pounds. But the supply of foreign wool since 1863 has been very greatly increased, a good deal of which yet remains in importers' hands, bearing down the market.

The sheep and wool industry was profitable down to 1893. Under the policy of protection it had attained to large proportions and great value. But it became known that wool was to be imported free, and in anticipation of it the market fell. Then, when the act was passed under which free importations might be made, wool was rushed in from foreign countries in immense quantities. The home supply falls in proportion as the foreign supply rises, and though prices have rallied a little, we are receiving here in Oregon for our uncleaned wool fully 6 cents a pound less than we would receive had protection been continued. Through reduction of the price of wool and loss of the value of sheep, caused mainly by free trade, the woolgrowers of the United States lost last year not less than $75,000,000; and there is no reason to suppose there will be any real revival of the industry so long as wool remains on the free list.—Oregonian.

Argument is no longer needed to make the woolgrowers appreciative of a protective tariff. The drop in prices and the corresponding shrinkage in bank accounts has done more than weighty arguments or tables of statistics to show the blight of free trade. Sheepmen who several years ago counted themselves rich are now concerned to make expenses meet and pay pressing obligations. Democrats may claim that free trade is not to blame, but it will have to bear the stigma until a scapegoat can be found.

MR. HERMANN AND A RE-NOMINATION.

The question as to the desirability of returning Mr. Hermann to congress from the First district is already agitating the republicans in the country west of the mountains and south of Multnomah. Mr. Hermann has been an efficient representative; few men in Washington have shown greater industry, or responded more promptly to the needs of his state. No congressman was ever more prompt in answering letters, and few men can match him, from a political standpoint, as a letter writer; as a hand-shaker he cannot be surpassed.

If the people of the First district are not headed off at the nominating convention, Mr. Hermann will continue to hold down that chair he has so long occupied. But the talk about his bolting in case he does not receive a nomination is not only very premature, but is certain to do his cause harm. The republicans of Oregon have started in for a new deal and they may go the whole figure; if so Hermann, like Dolph, will have to stand aside, for awhile at least, and if there is any bolting the stand by will almost certainly be permanent. Mr. Hermann better call off his friends who have commenced to bark before the danger is in sight.

RESTORE THE TARIFF ON WOOL

The congress that will assemble in December should restore the duty on wool. The manufacturers of woollens still have a highly protective duty, and the growers of wool should have a corresponding benefit. Possibly the president would veto an act to restore the duty on wool, but if he should, he would only emphasize the just demand for such an act, which would be felt in the next elections. If wool is to be free, woollen goods must be free also. Let us have consistent and fair free trade. Against this principle it is impossible to maintain a stand. Restoration of the duty on wool would be worth now not less than $1,000,000 a year to Oregon, and more hereafter.—Oregonian.

THE CHRONICLE and all Eastern Oregon republicans and democrats concur in the foregoing.

There are no doubt a lot of attorneys in the state who, when they read the decision of the supreme court in their particular cases, longed to discuss them over again in the public press. We presume some of our local attorneys would be glad to have some of their cases placed on the newspaper docket and tried out as soon as the Oregonian and Mr. Dolph have disposed of the one now under discussion. What's the use of courts anyway? Why not leave all these controversies to us newspapers? We know all about law and justice, juries and judges, what the public's need and what is best for them, in fact, there are few things we don't know more about than all the wise men and great judges, at least this is the belief of some newspapers.

New facilities for doing business always increase business. The construction of a telephone line into the interior will meet a long felt want, will place the merchants in more intimate relations with their patrons and do much to develop the country and increase business here. The local telephone company are to be commended for their enterprise in extending their line to Antelope. It is reported that they are contemplating the extension of this line in to Klickitat county also.

A gentleman from Klickitat county yesterday contracted to deliver, in this city, 100 tons of timothy hay of this year's crop. There is a very large acreage in Klickitat valley capable of producing a heavy crop of timothy hay; the balance of the valley is extremely fertile for all cereals; and yet some people wonder where the trade comes from which keeps up the business of The Dalles. The trade from that valley is a good one and forms one of the several sources of our prosperity.

Try and Use Some Sense.

Tomorrow the circus will be here and doubtless the usual number of people will go to see the fun. In the light of past experience a word of caution seems necessary, though it would appear that people have seen enough of circuses and their ways not to need their weaknesses pointed out. Circuses are like men in being a good deal the same and while some are more hoy than others, all have their faults. Every circus advertises that it has no sure-thing games or confidence men in its retinue and that the people need not fear of being robbed. But eternal vigilance is the price of security as well as liberty and those who go to the circus tomorrow should remember now easily they can make fools of themselves and try and use some common sense. Steer clear of anything that looks like a game of chance and don't be rushing around trying to accommodate strangers by changing twenty dollar pieces.

The management of the circus is not always at fault for the robbery that is practiced and we are not writing against circuses. The blame is upon persons who won't use ordinary prudence at a time when they should do so the most. Don't try to get something for nothing and when you buy a ticket have the exact change. Then there will be no trouble and kicks the next day. If you must spend your money buy lemonade, but don't give it to strangers just for the sake of being accommodating.
