REGARDING MR. KINCAID.

One single paper, so far as heard from, has come to the defense of Secretary Kincaid. The Union Republican says:

The Republican fails to see wherein there is grounds for criticism in this act of Mr. Kincaid. If doing what the law says to do is the only fault the critics of the secretary can find in his administration, he need have no fear of the way in which these criticisms will be received by the people of the state. Mr. Kincaid is laboring in the interest of the people in the administration of his trust, and while it is true he has not succeeded as well as he desired in all cases—for instance, in his efforts to save the state the $20,000 of the people's money paid the useless railroad commission—the fact remains, nevertheless, that he is endeavoring to administer his office as economically as possible and in the interest of the people.

Very good; but the Republican forgets that the railroad commission is endeavoring to administer its office as economically as possible; that it is doing just what the law says to do, viz., collecting all it can from the state treasury, and doing as little real service as possible; just what our distinguished secretary is doing. The real fact remains that the secretary has his nose very deep in the crib, and when the railroad commission, which is made to draw a salary and nothing more, tries to get its nose into the manger, he growls and kicks. He is endeavoring to administer his office as economically as possible for Mr. Kincaid; he even lets the state pay his attorneys, employed by him without authority of law to help him make the kick.

Now, Mr. Kincaid, suppose you commence a suit against that fellow, Harrison R. Kincaid, to determine his right to the ten or twelve thousand dollars which he is annually collecting from the people over and above the compensation provided by the constitution for him.

PUNISH ALL THIEVES.

Some of the fruit raisers near town have been, and are being, greatly annoyed by the incursions of grown hoodlums and badly-governed small boys upon their melon fields. There is not a farmer in the country who would not gladly give a manly boy, or a needy man, all the melons he wants, and the loss of such melons as are taken is inconsiderable; but when a whole field of melons is ruined by the use of a knife in the hands of a boy or man inspired to mischief by satan himself, the loss is a grievous one and the wrong one that should be severely punished.

The only proper course is to land every pilferer behind the bars, regardless of the social standing of his family, and cause him to suffer the lawful result of his offense. Fruit-stealing is winked at too much; to such an extent that many boys are filled with the idea that is the right of every manly boy to take anything and everything in the way of fruit that can be reached. But this is but one of the steps in the education of criminals, and the way to save the boy is to teach him by the terrible experience of captured thieves in other lines. Furthermore, the fruit raiser is as much entitled to protection as the merchant, the stock raiser and banker. We believe that the arrest of a few of the boys would be a good thing for them. The sending to jail, for a considerable term, of the grown-up hoodlums would be an excellent thing for the community.

Senator Peffer has done the, from his standpoint, only sensible thing—gone back on the free silver proposition and is preaching paper money, no interest and loans by the government. What Peffer wanted free silver for we could not guess; he owned no silver mines, was down on corporations—or pretended to be—by whom all the silver mines, which are worth anything, are owned; and he has heretofore appeared to us to be working at cross purposes. Now he is on the right track. We hope he will compel the money-holders to lend their money without interest to those in need. Then we shall ask him to compel the farmers to rent their farms without compensation, loan their horses and wagons, seeders and reapers in the same way, and lend their labor to the indolent on the same terms. Then we will select a farm, quit advising the government, the banks and corporations how to run their business, and the people how to vote, and retire to the farm and live in ease. Great is Peffer! Let his name be praised!

The Chicago Inter Ocean recently contained a cartoon, of which we are reminded by yesterday's dispatches, concerning the maintenance of the reserve by the board syndicate. The picture represented an Irish jaunting car, such as the English-imitating snobs use, the driver of which was Banker Morgan, with the word "Syndicate" on his hat-band. By his side sat a diminutive Uncle Sam, holding the ends of the lines, as children often do. On the back seat sat the coachman, the wrinkle in whose neck above his shirt collar identified him as the president. Below were the words: "An old trick. The youngster thinks he is driving." It is apparent that the syndicate still holds the reins, and Uncle Sam is being fooled.

A Druggist's Semi-Annual Report.

Some four or five months ago the people of The Dalles were notified of a new drugstore to be opened next door to the First National Bank, and almost directly opposite A. M. Williams & Co.'s store. The general opinion then prevailed that two stores were plenty, and a third store must therefore starve. But surely we are yet alive, and daily assuring our patrons, as well as the public in general, of our success. The doctors of our prosperous city, who are well able to judge our work, all acknowledge the efficient work done on their prescriptions, for most assuredly there never was any better, neater, more accurate or precise work done in this city than is at present done at this store.

Our stock of drugs is getting more complete every day. As we learn the wants of the people, so do we add to our stock, never aiming to attain such an immense quantity as to give it a chance to get old; but always buy in such amounts as to enable us to order frequently, thereby keeping our stock always in a fresh and healthful condition.

We know the drug business, and perchance not much else; but we are judges as to the quality of drugs, and therefore must know what we sell you when you give us a call. Come and ask for information, if nothing else.
