THE ARREST OF O. D. TAYLOR.

Saturday afternoon Parker Owen from Saginaw, Mich., in company with Deputy Sheriff Kelly went out to the farm on Mill creek, where Mr. Taylor resides, and not finding him at home, went on up the creek, meeting Mr. Taylor on the road, and arrested him upon a requisition from Michigan. The charge upon which he was arrested was that of obtaining money under false pretenses made in the police court at Saginaw by a Dr. Cornell and others, who were formerly associated with Mr. Taylor in dealing in Grand Dalles property.

Mr. Taylor was turned over to Owen, the officer from Michigan, who then brought him to town, and although there was no more prospect of Mr. Taylor's trying to run away than there would be of his attempting to use force against the officer, he was locked up in jail, while Officer Owen went to a saloon to get well braced up for the arduous task of taking Taylor to Michigan. One of the county officials telephoned to Huntington & Wilson, Mr. Taylor's attorney being out of town, and while Mr. Huntington was consulting with Taylor, Owen returned. Mrs. Taylor and her son arrived at the same time. Owen at once drew from his pocket a pair of handcuffs, and was about to adjust them. Mr. Huntington and Mr. Kelly protested so vigorously that Owen finally refrained; but refused to allow Taylor to consult his family, his attorney, or change his clothing (he was dressed in his working clothes, hat and boots when arrested), but taking him by the collar, marched him to a wagon at the courthouse door, and drove rapidly out of town in the direction of Sherman county, probably to avoid the writ of habeas corpus.

We know nothing of the facts upon which the arrest is based. We never had any confidence in the enterprises which Taylor and his associates were engaged in; we never had much more confidence in the men who were working with him in disposing of Grand Dalles property, among whom we are informed, are his present accusers. There are some of these former associates who will lap their chops at the present predicament of Taylor, like hungry wolves about the carcass of a fallen companion. Had the property the Interstate Investment Company was selling, and Taylor was deeding, proven valuable, or had these accusers succeeded in unloading on some one else, as they tried to do, they would never have thought there was any wrong in the business. There is a kind of honor among professional gamblers, which, when they get left in their own games, keeps their voices silent; but apparently not so among doctors, ministers, and speculators of the kind who surrounded Taylor in his prosperous days. If Taylor has violated the law, let him take the consequences.

The man, Owen, is evidently a greenhorn, who has had no experience in arresting men, and who lacks the first instincts of an officer and gentleman. In treating Taylor as he did, he was no doubt exhibiting his authority; but it was outrageous and contemptible, whether Taylor is guilty or innocent. As to this latter question, we refrain from discussion, and leave it to the courts.

The Baldwin locomotive works and the Westinghouse electric works have formed an alliance, which means the commencement of a new era in transportation. The success of the electric locomotives built for the Baltimore & Ohio tunnel service, is scarcely assured when the building of other locomotives after the same principle, is commenced for service on other roads. Before steam locomotives shall have been fully perfected, they will be displaced by electric motors, and in a few years the steam locomotive will be a thing of the past. It should be a matter of pride to every American citizen that all these advances in mechanical science begin here, and here attain their highest perfection.

Crop reports from this portion of the state indicate that of fall-sown grain there will be an average crop, and that of spring-grown grain there will be about half a crop. Considering the season, this is better than we anticipated two months ago. The result will be that there will hereafter be more summer fallowing and less volunteering and spring sowing. If a portion of every farm were used every other year for vegetables, about the same result would be attained as by summer fallowing, and the profits would be increased. Diversified farming must be learned here as everywhere.

When professional men of the education, intelligence and age of Drs. Holmes and Ausplund can't settle their differences without unloading their revolvers at each other, they ought to be confined in an asylum or, perhaps still better, be compelled to retire to a place where the rest of the community would be safe, and repeat the shooting until the world is rid of them. They are certainly of little use to any community, but are a constant menace.

Loaded for B'ar.

On August 11th a brave party of campers left The Dalles for 15-Mile creek to spend ten days in hunting and fishing. Mr. R. H. Guthrie had just returned from that locality and reported that he had seen numerous bear tracks, and so they went prepared for big game. Before starting they made liberal promises to their friends. When fish was mentioned, they talked hundreds; when venison was the subject of conversation, it was a deer apiece; if bear was hinted, they ridiculed the idea that they would not get at least one. Now they were not especially experienced hunters (none of them had taken a trip to the interior of Africa to hunt elephants lions and tigers) and their friends were caused considerable anxiety until they were heard from. While this information has come from outside sources, still we are sure that under the circumstances it is more accurate and can be relied upon with a great deal more certainty than if it came from the gallant campers themselves.

Upon receipt of this information, a special artist of ability was engaged. He has illustrated the striking events of this trip in a series of six truthful pictures. These pictures are now displayed in the windows of Pease & Mays, and will be enjoyed by all who see them.

From a gentleman who was in The Dalles from Grants it is learned that negotiations are being made for the reopening of the distillery at that place, which two months ago was compelled to close. Should the report prove true, the people of Grants will have great reason to rejoice. The distillery is a great consumer of wheat, and provides also a market for live stock. The plant was badly wrecked in the great flood of last summer, and the managers had not been able to recoup from their losses in time to meet pressing obligations. If the financial matters shall be satisfactorily arranged, and the concern re-opened, in all probability they will have a prosperous season. In connection with the distillery a large flouring plant is operated.
