AT DURRANT'S TRIAL

The Opening Argument for the Defense Begun.

WAS DICKINSON'S MASTERPIECE

Acknowledged a Strong Argument Considering the Case—Close Attention Paid.

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 25.—General Dickinson began the opening argument for the defense in the trial of Theodore Durrant this morning. Without any preliminary remarks he began a discussion of the incidents of April 3. First he wished to consider the personality of the young man accused of the crime. Durrant was ambitious, studious and of the highest character, as the speaker contended he is now. General Dickinson alluded to the contention of Assistant District Attorney Peixotto, made yesterday, that Miss Lamont was a victim of Durrant's unbridled passion. He said there was nothing in the mass of testimony taken to show that Durrant was not a moral young man. Durrant's whole demeanor, both before and after his arrest, he said, had been that of an innocent man. The defendant himself had told Mrs. Noble on the night Miss Lamont disappeared that he rode to school with her in the morning. On the day of his arrest, and when on the stand, he said the defendant made the same statements. The fact that Durrant left a book at Mrs. Noble's for Miss Lamont on April 3d, he said, contained too much method for a guilty man, and he, therefore, considered that as a circumstance going to show the innocence of the accused.

General Dickinson next made reference to the roll-call, upon which it is evident, the defense intends to base its case. He said if the correctness of the roll-call were admitted, the prosecution's case fell to the ground. He said Drs. Cheney and Gray, the only two persons who ever had the book in their possession, made no alterations, and he challenged the prosecution to show that anybody else had. He said the mute testimony of the book was corroborated by all of the students in the class, who testified on the witness-stand that they did not answer to Durrant's name. The statement of the prosecution that the students were unwilling witnesses, and withheld the most important testimony, was ridiculed, as he said the students, Glazier and Graham, the prosecution's two most important witnesses, were willing to tell what they knew.

The notes of the lecture were next considered. Dickinson showed what he said were Durrant's notes taken by himself at Dr. Cheney's lecture, and said they had been in his (Dickinson's) possession since April 17. Dickinson said this fact had an important bearing on Dr. Graham's statement to the effect that on April 20th Durrant told him he had no notes and asked to borrow Graham's in order that he might establish an alibi. The notes of Glazier and Durrant, arranged in parallel columns, were read to the jury, to show the dissimilarity of the two. Dickinson said the notes plainly showed that when Durrant and Glazier compared papers on April 10th, Durrant did not copy from Glazier.

General Dickinson said he made the assertion with confidence that when Dr. Graham testified that on April 20 Durrant told him he had no notes, he made a mistake. Graham, he said, he believed, had been unduly influenced by J. S. Dunnigan, a newspaper man, who is his most intimate friend. Dickinson did not mean that Dunnigan used improper methods to induce Graham to give the testimony, but said Graham had become so excited over the matter that he had become confused. Dickinson asked the jury if they did not believe Graham would have told Dunnigan the same day if Durrant had told him on April 20 that he had no notes. Instead of that he waited until October 5th. Another argument against his statement was the fact that at the time of the alleged interview Durrant did have notes of the lecture, which were in possession of his attorneys. He said there was no reason for Durrant to have made such a statement, and he asked the jury if they believed he would have told Graham he had no notes when at that very moment his notes were in possession of his attorneys.

Dickinson dwelt at length on the relations of defendant and Blanche Lamont, which, he said, had been perfectly honorable on both sides throughout. So far from being his sweetheart, or Durrant, her beau, he said they had only been friends and were no more to each other than other two members of the congregation. He had escorted her from the meetings at church a few times, and had always done so at the request of her aunt.
