A Big Job

It would be a big job to sell one hundred people very day anything that would interest them in your goods.

It's Dead Easy

If done the right way. This paper will tell several thousand at once.

WHAT IT MEANS.

The overwhelming triumph for republican principles in the late election is in accordance with the memorable utterance of President Lincoln that "You can fool a part of the people all the time, or all of the people a part of the time; but you cannot fool all of the people all the time." The people of the United States have been badly fooled during the past three years, but there are unmistakable signs that a lesson has been learned, the effect of which will not soon be forgotten. In the minds of intelligent observers the belief has been strong that the republicans would repeat the triumph of two years ago and last year, and this confidence has been fully justified.

The United States has had an experience with democratic tariff tinkering, and the experience has been anything but a pleasant one. With a bankrupt treasury and a demoralized commercial condition throughout the country, the democratic party went to the polls with a vain hope that some accident of politics might secure an endorsement of its policies; but the result shows that the country is through with the European-loving administration, and longs for the return to power of the party that believes in protection to American industries, a solid system of finances, and a foreign policy which means that the dignity of the United States will be preserved abroad and at home, no matter what the inconvenience or cost may be.

The confidence of the country is restored. The manufacturer can lay plans for a season of renewed prosperity. The woolgrower of Eastern Oregon can enlarge his flocks, well knowing that the unjust discrimination which has been practiced against him will be allowed no more. The republican party in the past has proven itself able to cope with the difficulties of government presented to it, and the same wise actions may be expected to continue in the future. Under a republican administration both democrats and republicans will be better off than under democratic rule, and the country as a whole will be more wisely governed.

To every citizen who is freed from party prejudice the results of Tuesday's elections cannot fail of bringing satisfaction.

Now comes the good news that Kentucky has gone republican. Bradley's majority is conceded by the democrats to be anywhere from 6,000 to 10,000. The legislature is in doubt. The republicans have won more than they dared hope for in Tuesday's election. Kentucky, Maryland and New Jersey were the only states where the battle was presumed to be close, and the party of protection has carried the three by substantial majorities. Should the Kentucky legislature prove to be republican, there will be absolutely nothing to comfort the hosts of democracy.

For the first time in many years Ohio is to be represented in the United States senate, as she should be, by two republican senators. Millionaire Brice has received notice to quit and Foraker will take a place by Sherman's side. Thus it is time brings its own healing and the factional war between Ohio republicans has ceased. Sherman and Foraker have both triumphed and the country rejoices with them.

Even Howard county, in Maryland, the home of United States Senator Gibson, was carried by the republicans. Truly, there is lamentation and loud weeping in the camp of the democrats. Democracy weeping for her victories because they are not.

President Cleveland showed remarkable foresight in issuing his Thanksgiving proclamation before the election. Had he waited till the returns were in, he would hardly have the courage to return thanks. As it is, the people of the United States have great cause for thankfulness. The good sense of the country has asserted itself in no uncertain manner.

It was an act of kindness on the part of the republicans to allow the democrats to carry Mississippi and Virginia. There is no telling what would have happened had the republicans made an effort to win.

EDITORIAL COMMENT ON TUESDAY'S ELECTION.

Portland Telegram: It looks as if the republican managers had decided to make their fight next year on the tariff, and on that issue they should be met by their ancient enemy. Let the silver mania be relegated to populism, whence it sprung and where it properly belongs, and let the republicans be met fairly and squarely upon the ground of their own choosing. They have not yet evolved any definite plan as to how they shall open the conflict, and it might be just as well to defer democratic action until they do.

Spokesman-Review: The significant feature of this morning's election news is that everybody expected it. Everybody knew the country was heart sick and weary of democratic misrule, and everybody knew that the people were aching to get at the ballot box and express their condemnation along with their renewed pledge of fealty to the republican party. In New York Hill has been rebuked; in Maryland, Gorman; in Ohio, Brice; in Kentucky, Carlisle; and Cleveland everywhere. Tammany alone saved its tiger skin, and that by appealing to all that is bad, vicious, low-toned and corrupt in the slums of New York City. The people want their political affairs directed by the republican party, and they are very much in earnest about it.

East Oregonian: The news the East Oregonian prints today is reliable and very interesting to republicans, who seem to have carried the day at the polls yesterday in the East. However, there is a little consolation in the news for democrats. Tammany having carried New York City, the democrats made gains in Massachusetts and "saved old Virginia." Gorman and Maryland seem to be snowed under with republican ballots. Maryland democrats having taken the advice of the Baltimore Sun and severely rebuked bossism and Gorman's undemocratic actions in the United States senate when the Wilson bill was before that body.
