ENGLAND, GERMBY AND THE TRANSVAAL.

The gravity of the Transvaal troubles increase daily, says the New York Tribune. The Boer government easily met, defeated and captured Jameson and his band of freebooters. But although the report that foreign settlers of Johannesburg have risen against the Boers, and have rescued Jameson from his captives, is discredited, civil war, and a civil war between two particularly resolute and militant factions, is still not improbable. The Boers are fighters by birth and training, and they have a bitter hatred for the foreigners, and especially for the British, whom they have long regarded as troublemakers and enemies of their state. The settlers, on the other hand, are bold and adventurous men, gathered from every land on earth, but mostly from the British Empire, who have for years been restless under what they consider the oppression of the Boers, and who are eager—the British majority of them—to avenge the disaster of Majuba Hill. In point of numbers the latter doubtless have the advantage. They form a majority of the white population of the country. Other advantages are on the side of the government. Left to themselves to fight it out, therefore, it might well be reckoned doubtful which side would win.

That they will be left alone is, however, scarcely to be expected. The British government has emphatically disavowed responsibility for and even sympathy with Jameson's raid. So has the Cape Colony government. So has the British South Africa company. But the disclaimers of the company are scarcely credible. That corporation must have known what was going on, whether it sanctioned it or not. As for the Cape government, its real head, the prime minister, was the founder and is still the chief spirit of the company; and it is said he has now resigned his portfolio, an act which will be generally regarded as proof of his complicity with Jameson's raid. If the trouble ends with the capture of Jameson intervention may be avoided. But with a prolonged and desperate struggle between the Boers and the British settlers in a country almost surrounded by British territory, it is useless to hope that outsiders will keep their hands off. No governmental movements will serve to restrain parties from flocking in to the aid of the settlers, from Zululand, from Bechuanaland, and from the Cape itself. In that way the sturdy Boers may be hopelessly outnumbered and robbed of the state which they founded and have maintained at cost of so much labor and blood.

Most ominous of all are the attitudes of Great Britain here and of Germany. The former may be guiltless of what has already been done. But she would unquestionably like to undo the work of 1880 and reincorporate the Transvaal into her African Empire. She evidently is resolved, moreover, to maintain to the fullest extent her somewhat vague "suzerain rights" over the Boer republic. The troops she is now hurrying to Cape Town may not be intended to wage war against President Kruger. But they will certainly arouse suspicion of intended intervention, and they will be ready at hand in case of an emergency. Nor is it impossible that an emergency calling for their use will soon arise. The German emperor has spoken with no uncertain sound. He promptly congratulated President Kruger upon his victory over Jameson, and has since given audiences at Berlin to a representative of the Boer government. He has shown in the strongest and most direct possible manner his sympathy with the Boers and his disapproval of British aggressions upon them. How much further he is prepared to go in the matter it would be hazardous to conjecture. But it is evident that the British think armed intervention by a German force within the range of possibilities.

At any rate, there is a vigorous protest against British landgrabbing in South Africa as well as in South America. It cannot be said that German interests are closely concerned in the Transvaal; certainly not as closely as American interests in Venezuela. The nearest German possessions are hundreds of miles away, and German settlers in the Transvaal itself are not numerous. The German emperor, however, has made up his mind that Africa has now been too much partitioned to admit of any further land-grabbing by any one power without regard to the wishes of others; and also that he will not see a small power oppressed by a great one. If Great Britain is not trying to grab land or to oppress the Boer republic, she has no occasion to be angry at what the Kaiser has said and done. He has not charged her with any such acts or intentions. But if she has any such schemes in mind, she may well take the Kaiser's words as a warning against them. She is not now confronting King Lobengula, but President Kruger with William II behind him.

Beginning Classes.
To the Editor:
Beginning classes will be organized in Union Street, Academy Park and East Hill Primary schools on Tuesday, Jan. 21st. Children who are 6 years of age on or before April 30, 1896, may enter these beginning classes, and should enter at the school most convenient to the home. Parents and guardians are requested to start all beginners for the organization of classes, as starting at such time is best for the child and most satisfactory to the teachers.
For a few years past it has been customary to organize the beginners' classes on the first Monday in March. However, it is thought that the first week of the new term will be a more suitable time to receive beginners, and new classes will not be organized in March this year.
Owing to the large enrollment in the first grade departments, only those entitled to enter can be received, and it will be useless for those under the above stated age to report at schools, expecting to enter.

Father Tells How His Baby Suffered from Eczema.

IN ITS WORST FORM
Grew Worse Under Treatment of Best Physicians. Tried

CUTICURA REMEDIES
Great Change in Five Days. To-day Entirely Cured, With Nice Head of Hair. Lively and Healthy.

I had a baby that had Eczema in its worst form. I had one of the best physicians in the city attending her, but she continued to get worse all the time under his treatment. He finally admitted that he was at his wits' end. I then got CUTICURA REMEDIES, and in a few days noticed great change in her condition. She continued to improve after that, and to-day is entirely cured, has nice head of hair, and is lively and healthy. I can fully recommend them as being the best medicines for the cure of this disease. I spent considerable money for drugs and doctor's bills, which was useless in this case, for I think if your remedies don't cure, nothing will. I am telling every one that I see suffering, about CUTICURA REMEDIES, and can cheerfully recommend them to those in need of them.

Summons.
In the Circuit Court of the State of Oregon for Wasco County.
William L. Isbell, Plaintiff.
Mattie J. Isbell, Defendant.
To Mattie J. Isbell, the above named defendant: In the name of the State of Oregon, you are hereby required to appear in the above entitled court, and answer the complaint filed against you in said court and cause, on or before the first day of the next regular term of the Circuit Court for Wasco County, Oregon, following the expiration of six weeks publication of this summons, to-wit: Monday, the 19th day of February, 1896, and you will take notice that if you fail to so appear and answer, for want thereof, plaintiff will take judgment against you for the relief prayed for in his complaint, to-wit: A decree of divorce forever dissolving the bonds of marriage heretofore and now existing between plaintiff and defendant, and for such other relief as may be equitable and just.
This summons is served upon you by publication thereof in The Dalles Chronicle, a weekly newspaper of general circulation, published at The Dalles, Wasco County, Oregon, by order of Hon. W. L. Bradshaw, judge of the above named court.
Dated at Dalles City, Or., December 24, 1895.

BAKE A BATCH OF BISCUITS

Sift one quart of flour, two rounding teaspoons of baking powder, and one teaspoonful of salt into a bowl; add three teaspoonsful of COTTOLENE and rub together until thoroughly mixed; then add sufficient milk to make a soft dough; knead lightly, roll thin about half an inch thick, and cut with a small biscuit cutter. Place a little apart in a greased pan, and bake in a quick oven for fifteen or twenty minutes. These biscuits should be a delicate brown top and bottom, light on the sides, and snowy white when broken open.

The secret of success in this recipe, as in others, is to use but two-thirds as much Cottolene as you used to use of lard.

Cottolene
will make the biscuit light, delicious, wholesome. Better than any biscuit you ever made before. Try it. Be sure and get genuine Cottolene. Sold everywhere in tins with trade-marks — "Cottolene" and Sheep's Head in cotton-plant wreath — on every tin.
