SATURDAY, - - JANUARY 18, 1896. NUMBER FORTY-FIVE.

By the president's proclamation Utah becomes an independent state of this indissoluble Union. Forty-fifth in the order of time, says the Tribune, it is not an exaggeration to say that the new commonwealth is among the first in prospects.

How long the Mormon element will retain its supremacy against the influences proceeding from a rapid growth of population and a corresponding development of material resources the future alone can determine.

The new state deserves a hearty welcome. It is to be regretted that a serious attempt was not made to end the present discredit and the dismal products which the degeneration of Nevada has produced.

The population of Oregon, according to the census just completed by the county assessor, is 362,762.

Bluestem wheat went up to 50 cents in Walla Walla yesterday. In the morning the price opened at 41 cents, but in a few jumps touched the half dollar mark. Over 100,000 bushels changed hands during the day. Unless the causes of the rise are purely local, the farmers of this region, who have not yet sold, can expect a higher price.

Remarks by Hon. E. L. Smith.

A portion of the address delivered by President E. L. Smith at the fruit convention in Portland contains some matters of interest to the fruit-growers of Wasco county.

"The past year's experience has amply demonstrated to me the fact that the greatest impediment to progressive, successful fruit culture is the apathy and indifference of those engaged in the pursuit.

"Indeed, I feel that during the year we have taken a step backward, not only in the work of our society, but in the removal of the office of the state board from the metropolis to a place where it is not readily accessible to the eastern portion of the state nor to those coming from other states with a view of engaging in the fruit industry.

"Your chairman does not share in the opinion that there is no field of labor for a state horticulture society in Oregon. Many of us who are devoting time and means to orcharding would welcome and find invaluable the methods and experience of other growers.

"It is doubtful if any portion of our country can show a greater percentage of arable soil adapted to gardening, and I use the word in its comparative sense, than Oregon; and it will indeed be lamentable if we neglect any means to promote this most promising industry."
