

LOSS OF VOICE
After Acute Bronchitis
CURED BY USING
AYER'S Cherry Pectoral
A PREACHER'S EXPERIENCE.

"Three months ago, I took a violent cold which resulted in an attack of acute bronchitis. I put myself under medical treatment, and at the end of two months was no better. I found it very difficult to preach, and concluded to try Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. The first bottle gave me great relief; the second, which I am now taking, has relieved me almost entirely of all unpleasant symptoms, and I feel sure that one or two bottles more will effect a permanent cure. To all ministers suffering from throat troubles, I recommend Ayer's Cherry Pectoral."—E. M. BRAWLEY, D. D., Dist. Secretary, Am. Bapt. Publication Society, Petersburg, Va.

Strong Drink is Raging.

Following is the Good Templar prize essay, written by Mr. G. E. Stewart, and delivered at a recent meeting of the Good Templars lodge, receiving a handsome gold medal in appreciation:

In the year 1889 there occurred one of the most horrifying disasters that has ever been chronicled in the pages of history for years. The breaking of a mighty reservoir, the outburst of furious and raging torrents of imprisoned waters from behind those vast walls, the swift and terrible speed at which they came tearing and plunging through the peaceful vale of Conemaugh, converting it instantaneously into a valley of death; quickening its speed at every leap, destroying lives and property at every plunge; growing fiercer and roaring louder and surging wilder and rolling higher, until with one stupendous swell it seemingly combined all of its strength into one terrible effort, and charged, madder than ever, upon the peaceful and unsuspecting inhabitants of the city of Johnstown, eighteen miles away. A horror-stricken man goes riding with lightning rapidity into that city with the alarming cry of "Run to the hills!" But the people, wholly ignorant of their awful fate, only regarded him as a lunatic, and heeded not his warning in time to escape.

So it is with the enemy of our souls—strong drink, that accursed, disreputable, disgraceful, damnable widow and orphan-maker and pauper-manufacturer; a blight upon many a young man and woman who otherwise would be sinless; a murderer of many a strong man lying still and cold in death's embrace in the gloom of a loathsome drunkard's grave, who would otherwise be living in peace and happiness with his beloved companion and darling children. Oh, why is it they will not listen to the warning appeals of their fellow-beings, and seek what is best for their eternal welfare? Why do they utterly ignore earnest entreaties in their behalf—the messages of danger ahead; the urgent words coming to them as from that Johnstown hero to flee to the hills of refuge and safety and salvation?

Strong drink is raging! Slowly, but surely, it is doing its deadly work. It is weakening the vital powers of mankind the world over. It is sapping the life-blood of many an innocent youth who has assured promise of noble manhood. It is being poured down the throat and rushed down into the stomach, a very cataract of the vilest poison.

Strong drink is raging! Day after day, week after week, month after month, the newspapers of the world are regularly recording crimes, divorce cases and deaths, consequent upon the ravages of the heinous liquor traffic. A man has murdered his fellow-being while drunk, and is sentenced to be hanged. A woman sues her husband for divorce upon the grounds of cruel and inhuman treatment caused by drunkenness. A man is found in the gutter, dying from delirium tremens. A young man of good standing in the community becomes despondent and shoots himself by virtue of the weakened condition of his constitution by strong drink. Not a day passes but that in any of our large dailies will appear numerous instances of the character just referred to. Homes are ruined; families broken up and rendered destitute; husbands become brutes; wives are often consigned to the poorhouse; children become beggars, and manhood, physical and spiritual, is utterly destroyed; the brain is on fire and reason is dethroned; man is deprived of a happy life in this world and of eternal life in the great hereafter.

Strong drink is raging! Experience will prove it; general observation will teach it; physicians tell you so; all honorable business men are ready to reiterate it; newspapers assert it; authors and orators are insisting upon it. The Bible, the true source of happiness from whence cometh all light and life, corroborates it. Strong drink is raging! These awful words originate with the wisest man that ever lived, and that ever will live. They have resounded through century after century of the past; they will reverberate through the far-distant future, though thousands of years roll by.

"At the last it biteth like a serpent and stingeth like an adder!" How true this is! When a man has become so beastly and brutish as to sacrifice his manhood that his passions may be gratified; when he is so steeped in disgrace, misery and shame; the pangs of the serpent are upon him; the poisonous sting, as of a rattlesnake, is penetrating his body through and through with pains that none but a drunken wretch can fully realize or imagine.

Strong drink is raging! Oh, may we profit by the lessons of this proverb, and go out and sound the warning to fallen humanity to flee to the hills of rescue and relief ere the infernal floods of strong drink, with all their wreck and ruin, bear down upon them and bury them in a drunkard's grave, and eventually consign them to eternal torment and eternal damnation.

Geo. W. Jenkins, editor of the Santa Maria "Times," Cal., in speaking of the various ailments of children said: "When my children have croup there is only one patent medicine I ever use, and that is Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. It possesses some medicinal properties that relieve the little sufferers immediately. It is, in my opinion, the best cough medicine in the market." If this remedy is freely given as soon as the croup cough appears it will prevent the attack. It is also an ideal remedy for whooping cough. There is no danger in giving it to children, as it contains nothing injurious. For sale by Blakeley & Houghton, Druggist.

"Give me a liver regulator and I can regulate the world," said a genius. The druggist handed him a bottle of DeWitt's Little Early Risers, the famous little pills. For sale by Snipes-Kinersly Drug Co.

If there is any one thing that need to be purified, it is politics, so the reformer says, and many agree thereto. But blood tells, and as a blood purifier and liver corrector Simmons' Liver Regulator is the best medicine. "I use it in preference to any other."—So wrote Mr. S. H. Hyssell, of Middleport, Ohio. And Dr. D. S. Russell, of Farmville, Va., writes, "It fulfills all you promise for it."
