HANGED AT FOLSOM

The Russian Kovalev Paid the Death Penalty.

HIS CRIME AN ATROCIOUS ONE

The Murder of the Webers at Sacra-mento Last Year—Thought He Would be Pardoned.

FOLSOM, Cal., Feb. 21.—Ivan Kovalev, the Russian ex-convict who escaped from the island of Saghalein three years ago, today paid the penalty for his participation in one of the most atrocious crimes in the criminal annals of California.

A little over one year ago, in Sacra-mento, Kovalev and another escaped convict named Mathlen Stecherbakav murdered F. H. L. Weber, an aged merchant, and his wife. The murderers broke into the residence of the old couple, who lived over the grocery store, and literally hacked them to pieces with a hatchet. The assassins were bare-footed, and after wading in the gore of their victims they ransacked the house, their movements being traced by their bloody footprints. Kovalev was finally arrested in San Francisco, and when he was taken into custody he had on a suit of clothes belonging to the murdered merchant.

Stecherbakov was stabbed to death while attempting to rob a man in San Jose.

Kovalev during his trial made a partial confession, in which he said he saw the Webers killed, but would not admit he had a hand in it. He laid it upon his partner. Kovalev has maintained, ever since his escape from the Russian penal colony, that he had been sent there for a political offense.

Russians who have conversed with him, however, said he was not a man of sufficient intelligence to be mixed up in an affair of state. He was a shoemaker by trade and a man of very ordinary intelligence. He did not possess the college education which had been attributed to him. The other day he admitted to one of the prison officers that he had been sent to the Saghalein islands for life for poisoning a man in Russia. The Russian interpreter sent to the pen-itentiary for the purpose of spending the night with the condemned man endeav-ored to get him to tell something more about the murder of the Webers, but Kovalev positively refused to do so. He was urged to give the address of his mother in Russia so that she might learn of his fate, and pray for him, but he absolutely refused to do so.

Another attempt was made to inter-view him this morning, but all he would say was that he wanted to be left alone. He refused to eat a tempting breakfast which was set before him, and declined a glass of whiskey, and would take nothing but a cup of milk.

It was the general opinion that Kova-lev had an idea he would not hang. He would not permit a prison minister to offer any religious consolation. He said he had some doubts about the existence of God and expressed the opinion that when a man died that would be the last of him.

Kovalev was practically a dead man when he stepped upon the gallows. The life had almost been frightened out of him. He was so weak and trembling that he could scarcely walk on the gal-lows. But there was no painful wait. He was launched into eternity in less than a minute after he came from his cell.

THE ASEPTOLIN TREATMENT.

The Discoverer Overwhelmed With Cor-respondence.

New York, Feb. 21.—Dr. Cyrus Edson informs the Associated Press that he is overwhelmed with correspondence since the Associated Press sent out his report about his solution of aseptolin, so much so that even with three stenographers at work he is unable to reply to many of the letters received. He desires, through the Associated Press, to express his thanks for the kindly congratulations received and says:

"The aseptolin treatment can be ad-ministered by a physician only, and, second, it cannot be carried on by cor-respondence. The treatment is very sim-ple and can be administered by any phy-sician as well as by me. Under no cir-cumstances whatever will I allow the aseptolin to be sent to any patient. It will be sent to his physician only and must be administered by that physician.

"I decline absolutely to give the pa-tient of any other physician advice about his case. I will gladly correspond with any physician about his case. I will see no private patient—outside of my own practice—except as a consult-ant with his physician. Any patient wishing to see me must bring a letter from his physician asking me to see him. The final result of my examination I will hand to that physician and will not communicate it to the patient.

"I wish to impress on those suffering the fact that their own physicians, who know their condition, are infinitely bet-ter judges of the treatment needed than I can be. Their own physicians have studied their case; they know the con-ditions existing; they are the only ones who can say whether aseptolin will help.

"I am willing to send a 2-ounce bot-tle of aseptolin to any physician in the United States so that he may be con-vinced, by the improvement of his pa-tients, of its value. I wish to repeat that this is not a specific for consump-tion, although it is for malaria and sep-ticæmia. It is folly to expect any re-sult from it when the patient has been given up. The treatment with it is merely what I called it, a rational treat-ment, because it follows the line indi-cated by nature. It has done and will do good in many cases, but it is not a remedy which will restore lungs which have been destroyed.

"I would suggest to surgeons having patients with bad hygienic surroundings and who fear septic results that the aseptolin has been exceedingly success-ful in cases of septic poisoning."
