THE REGULATOR LINE OUR COMFORT.

The failure to open the locks at the promised time, while it is a disappointment to the people of this section keenly feel, will not work the hardship that would result were it not for the independent line of steamers maintained by the citizens of The Dalles between this place and Portland. Freight rates, through the agency of the Regulator line, have been brought to a figure which enables the merchants of The Dalles to sell at lower prices than can be done in any town east of the Cascades.

The opening of the locks, if it ever happens, will give The Dalles the prestige of being the point highest up the Columbia that boats from the river's mouth can reach without a break in cargo. The opening of the river means this city will have terminal rates on all classes of goods, (it now does on many) and will be the wholesale supply point for the country east of us. The farmers of the interior will receive more for their products and pay less for their goods.

The Dalles will suffer less from the failure to open the locks than will the people of Sherman, Klickitat, Gilliam and Crook counties, who haul their wool and grain to this place and buy their supplies here. With a greater reduction in freight rates, and the consequent cheapening in the price of staple goods, the benefits to them would be material. As it is, the people of these counties can join with the citizens of The Dalles in gratitude that, if we haven't the locks completed, we at least have the Dalles, Portland & Astoria Navigation Company's boats, an enterprise which has been the deliverance of a vast section of country.

Long life and prosperity to the Regulator line, for it is deserving of our gratitude!

SHERMAN AND MORTON.

If the canvas of Governor Morton vs prosecuted vigorously, with hopes of success, it may have the effect of bringing the friends of John Sherman to rally around him again as a presidential candidate. The objection against Morton and Sherman is their age, it not being believed that men who have reached their years can stand the wear and tear of an office like the presidency, which has caused men of strong constitutions to fail physically. There is a large body of Republicans throughout the nation who would yet like to see John Sherman reach the goal to which, in his younger years, his ambition tended. The unfinished stand he has taken upon the question of what sort of currency this country shall possess has served to bring out still more prominently his qualities of statesmanship.

If men like Platt and Depew really believe that Morton is within the limits of a presidential age, then the friends of the Ohio senator can turn to him and press his claims, in case McKinley's nomination should prove impossible. Sherman is one of that class of statesmen who have yearned for the presidency—the class in which were Henry Clay, the idol of the earlier half of the century, as James G. Blaine was in the latter. With Clay and Blaine are the names of Webster, Calhoun, Seward, Chase, Douglas, and men made in the mould of statesmanship, but who, through tricks of fortune, failed in their great desire.

It is not among the probabilities that Sherman will reach the presidency, but it would be a Nemesis if instead of being the man from whom the delegates repeatedly turned to pick another, the circumstances that attended Garfield's choice would be reversed and the friends of McKinley, believing his success impossible, should honor the nation by bringing about the nomination of Sherman.

The conference committee of the senate has agreed to accept the house resolutions regarding Cuba as a substitute for those passed by the senate. The report of the committee will undoubtedly be accepted by the latter body and the sentiment of congress find unanimous expression. If the legislators would show as much broad mindedness in discussing the silver question, an agreement could be reached, which would be far more satisfactory to the country than the petulant wrangling that is now going on.

The Wilson Tariff Act has been in operation long enough to prove its unfitness for the needs of the country. One of its worst features is the repeal of the Reciprocity conventions, which had been arranged under the McKinley act. The result has been disastrous to our export trade with countries, who under the McKinley tariff bought largely from the United States. The Wilson bill has pulled down a system it will take a long time to restore to its former conditions. The Democratic policy has always been one of demolishing.

The exposure to all sorts and conditions of weather that a lumberman is called upon to endure in the camps often produces severe colds, which, if not promptly checked, result in congestion or pneumonia. Mr. J. O. Davenport, ex manager of the Fort Bragg Redwood Co., an immense institution at Fort Bragg, Cal., says they sell large quantities of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy at the company's store and that he has himself used this remedy for a severe cold and obtained immediate relief. This medicine prevents any tendency of a cold toward pneumonia and insures a prompt recovery. For sale by Blakeley & Houghton, Druggist.

J. W. Pierce, Republic, Ia., says: "I have used One Minute Cough Cure in my family and for myself, with result so entirely satisfactory that I can hardly find words to express myself as to its merit.
