NATIONAL LIFE OR SILVER.

"No protection until there is a straight and genuine Republican senate and a president of the same pattern." This is the answer, says the Tribune, of the Democrats, Populists and silverites to the overwhelming majority by which the people have demanded the restoration of protective duties. And there are Democrats so obtuse that they imagine that this condition will help their party. The American people do not take a slap in the face with meekness, if Democrats only knew the fact, but are in the habit of making their will known and respected. They strike back, sometimes smashing things which at first they had not recognized as hostile to their welfare. In 1856 they demanded no further extension of slavery. The Lecompton Democracy disregarded and insulted them. When they struck back slavery went out of existence as an enemy of national life, and Democracy went out of power for thirty years. So in 1894 they demanded a restoration of protective duties. The Democrats and silverites defy and insult them. The American people will strike back; of that every man who knows America is sure. It is not their way to smash only the tricksters and demagogues who appear on the surface, but the causes behind them which make such demagogues possible, and which threaten the nation's prosperity.

Their natural impulse will be to smash the silver interest bodily—every fragment or trace of intention to use silver as money except as a token, just as paper is used to represent gold. That has not heretofore been the temper of the nation. It was not the temper of the nation to destroy human slavery until slavery made war. But anything that threatens the nation's life and prosperity, be it what it may, Americans will treat as an enemy. Had any slaveholding state instantly stamped out disloyalty, and made it known that slaveholding was not necessarily hostile to national life, the result might have been different. The silver states will now proceed to show, and quickly, whether they mean to put silver before national welfare and national honor. If they mean that, the people will quickly and surely make an end of all talk of bimetalism in this country, and of every thought of compromising with an interest which threatens both the honor and the prosperity of the nation.

Predictions are not expensive or valuable, silver men may say. The best that any friend can do today is to state without reserve precisely what public opinion is in regard to the latest manifestation of hostility to the public welfare. For it must not be forgotten that the silver bolters are exactly in the attitude of the slaveholding rebels who put their personal convictions and interests before the welfare of the Nation. These silver men avow a conviction that protection of American industry is necessary to the Nation's prosperity and the well-being of 20,000,000 wage-earners, wool-growers and lumbermen; but they deliberately threaten to deny this admitted public need in order to serve interests of their own. The kindest thing that anybody can do is to tell them that he who makes war on the welfare of the American people goes down, and cannot begin to guess how far popular indignation may alter previous inclinations respecting the interests which thus defies the declared will of the nation.

Men who have honestly advocated bimetalism, but not free coinage of silver by the United States alone, have been placed in a false position for years by the demands of the silver interest. It is the naked truth that most of them are today in the humor to treat the whole business as the nation treated slavery, when that interest was not content with toleration, but demanded extension into every territory or disruption of the union. Men of great power are now saying to each other: "This has gone too far, and if bimetalism means destruction of national industries there must be an end of all compromise or concession." Nobody except the silver men themselves can check or modify that feeling. They can do it only by burying out of sight every politician who attempts or threatens to put the silver interest before the welfare and the honor of the nation. For the nation needs protection of its industries, and will have it. The nation knows that its honor requires revenue large enough to cover its expenses, and will have that revenue raised. The men who refuse both are going to find a tremendous national and loyal feeling, even in the states which they imagine exclusively devoted to the silver interest.

THE CASCADE LOCKS.

Mitchell Monitor: The people of Eastern Oregon and Washington are again doomed to disappointment in regard to an open river. The locks are not open at the time agreed upon, nor is there any certainty about when they will be opened. It is, to say the least, very strange that the government engineers should wait until now to discover that certain things must be done before the canal could be used. It looks as though some "influence" had blinded the eyes of those whose duty it is to oversee the construction of government works. But it is idle to speculate on the course of such vexatious delays. The fact remains that the locks are unopened and will remain so for, perhaps, a year or two.

Goldendale Sentinel: March 1st has come and gone and the locks at the Cascades are as useless to the Inland Empire, so far as their present benefit is concerned, as they were before a stone had been turned preparatory to their construction. For these public works Uncle Sam has squandered a large sum of money; but from them, as yet, our citizens have reaped no practical benefit. Their early completion has been promised once too often, and the people of the Inland Empire will not be hoodwinked longer. With a great deal of bombast on the part of "Col." Day, the work was promised to be so far advanced as to allow boats to pass through by the first of this month. Only another broken promise. Therefore for good and sufficient reasons are The Dalles papers aroused and wish to know the why and wherefore for these delays. The people have been duped long enough, and henceforth will not sit idly by in acquiescent silence and wait, meekly wait, and murmur not. Every newspaper situated in the territory contingent to the great Columbia should no longer remain silent, but arouse public opinion to that extent which will bring so great a pressure to bear on our senators and representatives that they will heed and obey; then will the time soon come when the waters of the mighty Oregon will roll on unchecked to the sea, bearing on her broad bosom the products of the great Inland Empire, which will remain in unbroken bulk until they have reached the briny waters of the sea.
