

UNTOLD MISERY
FROM RHEUMATISM
C. H. King, Water Valley, Miss., cured by Ayer's Sarsaparilla

"For five years, I suffered untold misery from muscular rheumatism. I tried every known remedy, consulted the best physicians, visited Hot Springs, Ark., three times, spending $1000 there, besides doctors' bills; but could obtain only temporary relief. My flesh was wasted away so that I weighed only ninety-three pounds; my left arm and leg were drawn out of shape, the muscles being twisted up in knots. I was unable to dress myself, except with assistance, and could only hobble about by using a cane. I had no appetite, and was assured, by the doctors, that I could not live. The pains, at times, were so awful, that I could procure relief only by means of hypodermic injections of morphia. I had my limbs bandaged in clay, in sulphur, in poultices; but these gave only temporary relief. After trying everything, and suffering the most awful tortures, I began to take Ayer's Sarsaparilla. Inside of two months, I was able to walk without a cane. In three months, my limbs began to strengthen, and in the course of a year, I was cured. My weight has increased to 165 pounds, and I am now able to do my full day's work as a railroad blacksmith."

THE CHURCHES.

AT THE BAPTIST CHURCH.
The sermon at the Baptist church, Rev. O. D. Taylor pastor, was from Phil. iii:9: "Not having mine own righteousness, but the righteousness of Christ, the righteousness that is of God by faith." The Savior often rebuked the self-righteousness of the Pharisee, and taught his disciples that except your righteousness exceed the righteousness of the scribes and Pharisees, ye shall in no wise enter the kingdom of God. Paul, by birth a Hebrew of the Hebrews, and by education and belief a Pharisee of the Pharisees, until his conversion depended upon the righteousness which is of the law, or self-righteousness. After his conversion we find him no longer trusting to the deeds of the law, but to the righteousness which he describes in my text. Self-righteousness is offensive to God, because it assumes as unnecessary the sacrifice of Christ. This was illustrated by the Savior in the parable of the marriage feast where came a man without the wedding garment. In response to the question, "Friend, how camest thou in hither, not having on the wedding garment?" the man was speechless, and he was cast out into outer darkness. This man's sins was not that he came to the feast: on the contrary he did well to come, for he had been invited; but he insulted the king's son by refusing to wear the wedding garment, which had been provided for every guest. So the man insults God who trusts to his own morality for justification, and thus refuses the garment of Christ's righteousness, in which to appear at the marriage supper of the Lamb. This doctrine of grace, while it is humbling to the flesh, honors God, in that it exalts Christ and gives all glory to him as the author of our salvation. It also places all on an equality before God and before Him their is neither Jew nor Greek, nor barbarian, Scythian, bond nor free, but Christ is all and in all.

M. E. CHURCH.

The morning sermon was an appeal to Christians to "Be strong in the Lord, and the power of His might;" Eph. vi:10. After the sermon one person was received into the church.
The subject for the evening sermon was "Know Thyself," taken from the story of the prodigal son, Luke xv:17. Attention was called to the disastrous effect of not "knowing thyself," so common in the experience of men. We must know ourselves as creatures among creatures, that we may be humble and feel our dependence upon God. We should know ourselves as man among men, that we may know our fellowman and perform our duty toward man in the fear of the Lord. By knowing ourselves we may save much time, escape much sorrow, and save ourselves from eternal loss. Various agencies are employed in bringing man to himself, such as adversity in business life, physical affliction and loss of loved ones. The two special agencies are the preaching of the gospel and the influence of the divine spirit. The prodigal son came to himself after having wasted time, money and influence; yet in time to save himself.

Mr. Bradley's Defense.

Mr. Darwin Bradley, mention of whose marriage to Mrs. Minnie Angel was made in THE CHRONICLE a few days ago, called at the office on Saturday, and desires a few words said in palliation or explanation of his late matrimonial venture. While denying none of the essential facts as stated in the issue of March 10th, he deprecates the coloring in which they are given, as leading to a wrongful interpretation, when not taken in connection with other points of the brief family history which led to the marriage last week.

Mr. Bradley says the divorce did not arise from any suspicion on the part of Mr. Angel of unfaithfulness; that there had been domestic trouble for years between Mr. and Mrs. Angel, and the divorce would have resulted if she had never known Bradley. The latter says that Mr. Angel and himself were always the best of friends, and are to this day. The Bradley family had lived in another house, on the farm, for which he regularly paid rent, and in that house Mrs. Bradley died. He says it is true he has been in hard circumstances, but that it was his intention to pay his obligations to the last dollar. He says, also, that there has been a great deal of unfounded talk, or gossip, concerning his relations with Mrs. Angel. He brands it all as falsehood, and resolved by marrying Mrs. Angel and taking up his residence in The Dalles, to live down the bad name so gratuitously given him, instead of running off to other fields. He did not become engaged to Mrs. Bradley until after the divorce was granted—January 15th. The engagement was by letter, both agreeing that the best course to pursue in the matter was to become married and settle down in the community where they had been defamed and live it down by a life of unimpeachable integrity. The marriage so soon, Mr. Bradley says, is by force of chance. When Mrs. Angel arrived from Silverton her coming was in the interest of getting two of her children, which the court allowed her the custody of. She did not appear in defense of the divorce suit, and Angel was granted the divorce by default. But after arriving, Bradley sought her, telling her of the scandalous talk going around concerning them, and, acting upon the advice of friends who recommended him to become married at once, he urged her to do so. She agreed. The tale is told. Mr. Bradley hoped that he would be able to remain in The Dalles and make a living; but he is afraid the community has become so prejudiced they will not assist him by giving him employment in his profession, and thus possibly compelling him to go elsewhere to make a living.

HE HAS HIS TROUBLES.

Trials of a Messenger Boy for the Telegraph Company.

A telegraph messenger probably sees as much of the other side of human nature as a doctor. One told an Atchison Globe writer recently that a woman never opened a telegram without turning pale, and, when the message was not alarming, they looked disappointed. He delivered about two death messages a day, four birth messages, a great many business messages, and once in a great while a love message that makes him tired to carry it. He carried one recently to a young man in town that read:

"How are you to-day darling?"

The answer went promptly back by the boy and was to this effect: "I am better, love." He once carried a message of death to a colored woman, and after reading it her emotion overcame her to such an extent that she caught the messenger in her arms and soundly boxed his ears. Another colored woman refused to open or sign for a message, but walked the floor and beat her breast, and screamed, supposing it announced a death. When all the neighbors had come in, one more venture some than the rest read the message. It was simply a notice that the woman's sister would come up from Leavenworth that evening to see her.

A "CLEAN" SHAVE.

Precautions Which Might Be Adopted for the Safety of Customers.

Nothing is easier than for contagion to be conveyed from a diseased to a healthy skin during the act of shaving, and many cases have now been recorded, says the Medical Press, proving that diseased processes have in this manner been propagated. Probably the readiest manner available to the barber for preventing such untoward occurrences would be by sterilizing his "instruments" by means of heat, either by steam or boiling water. Razors should be made so that their handles would not suffer from the exposure to high degrees of heat, and the rule should be enforced that in no case should any of the "instruments" be used consecutively without having first been submitted to the sterilizing process. Under this rule, then, each customer would be sure of having a "clean" shave in more senses than one. Of course, also, on the principle of a "fresh pot of tea for each customer," a freshly scalded-out lather pot should be included with each shave. Unless these or similar precautions be carried out in barbers' shops, cases of the conveyance of infectious skin diseases from customer to customer cannot fail to occur.

Nature Now Does What Men Have Long Tried in Vain to Do.

Nature is doing for California vineyardists what they long and fruitlessly tried to do for themselves. It is reported from many localities that the phylloxera, the most serious pest that has ever attacked the vines, is dying out. The experts have tried every remedy to stay the progress of this pest, but without avail, and six years ago the vineyardists of the Sonoma and Napa valleys plowed up all their vines and replanted the ground with resistant stock. The experts believed that all non-resistant vines were doomed to destruction by the phylloxera. But reports have recently come to the state inspector of orchard pests that a material falling off in the ravages of the pest has been noticed for some time. Vines once affected by it are now almost free. The inspector has begun a thorough investigation of the pleasing phenomena. He thinks some natural enemy of the pest has appeared or that some deadly disease has attacked the phylloxera and is exterminating it. Whatever is the cause, the result will mean great gain for the vineyardists.

A Pertinent Answer.

An amusing correspondence recently took place between a Wisconsin farmer and a local boiler firm. The farmer wrote as follows: "Dere Fires I have a 1,000 akers of trees that I want cut. Im pore but Im willing to pay too hundred dolers fer an engin that will do my work," and he went on to explain just what sort of an engine he wanted. The boiler firm saw that the engine necessary to accomplish the devastation of his virginal forest would cost $3,000, and they informed him to this effect. A week passed and then the following pithy epistle came from the Wisconsin woods: "Dere Fires what 'n all git out wud I want of an engin or boiler if I hed $3,000?"
