

"I was troubled for years with a sore on my knee, which several physicians, who treated me, called a cancer, assuring me that nothing could be done to save my life. As a last resort, I was induced to try Ayer's Sarsaparilla, and, after taking a number of bottles, the sore began to disappear and my general health improve. I persisted in this treatment, until the sore was entirely healed. Since then, I use Ayer's Sarsaparilla occasionally as a tonic and blood-purifier, and, indeed, it seems as though I could not keep house without it."-Mrs. S. A. FIELDS, Bloomfield, Ia.

STURY UF A RING. It Proved an Ill Omen to All Who Owned It.

It is stated upon what appears to be good authority that in one of the parks in the Spanish capital city of Madrid a magnificent ring hangs by a silken cord about the neck of the statue of the Maid of Almodma, the patron saint of Madrid. This ring, says Harper's Round Table, though set with diamonds and pearls, is nevertheless entirely unguarded. The police pay no attention to it, nor is there any provision made for watching it by special officers, because it is not believed that any thief, however daring, would venture to appropriate it to his own use; and when the history of the ring is considered, it is hardly to be wondered at that a superstitious people prefer to give it a wide berth. According to the story that is told of it, the ring was made for King Alionso XII., the father of the present king of Spain. Alfonso presented it to his cousin, Mercedes, on the day of their betrothal. How short her married life was all know; and on her death the king presented the ring to his grandmother, Queen Christina. Shortly afterwards Queen Christina died, and the king gave the ring to his sister, the Infanta del Pilar, who died within the month following. The ring was then given to the youngest daughter of the Duc de Montpensier. In less than three months she died, and Alfonso, by this time fearing that there was some unlucky omen connected with the bauble, put it away in his own treasure box. In less than a year the king himself died, and it was deemed best to put the ring away from all the living. Hence it was hung about the neck of the bronze effigy of the Maid of Almodma, where it appears to be as safe as though surrounded by a cordon of police.

A CORONATION CEREMONY. Crowning an Ethiopian Emperor One Un-equaled in Barbaric Splendor.

The coronation of the emperors of Ethiopia at Axoum, the holy city of Abyssinia, is a ceremony unequaled in barbaric splendor in all Africa. It even touches the imagination of the white man, says the Pall Mall Gazette, and arouses his black brother to delirious enthusiasm. The sacred person of the cmperor, in great pomp, clothed in royal purple silk, with a gold cross in his hand, proceeds, on a horse with trappings of indescribable richness, to the church, followed by the dignitaries' and aristocracy of the empire, also clothed in all the richness and bright colors of the east. Arrived before the sacred edifice, on descending he finds many young girls, dressed in white, who prevent his entrance by hands of scarlet ribbon, and who ery: "Who are you that wish to enter the Church of Axoum?" "I am your emperor, the negus neghesti (king of kings) of Ethiopia." "No, you are not our emperor, you are not the negus neghesti," and three times they lower and raise the ribbon. On the fourth the negus cuts it with his sword, crying: "I am the king of Sion," in the midst of tremendous acclamations. Conducted to the center of the edifice, to the sacred stone, which is only stepped over by the emperor, and by him once, the abuns (Abyssinian pontiff) advances amid breathless silence, gives unction, conse-crates him, and he takes the solenn oath. Then, to the accompaniment of music, ringing of bells and dancing, he receives the imperial diadem. The oath runs as follows: "I swear to defend Christian truth and religion, to keep the faith of Mark, destroy apostates, and govern Ethiopia and its inhabitants in the holy name of God."
