We are showing a splended line of Spring and Summer Suitings at lower prices than can be obtained elsewhere. No need to patronize foreign firms employing Chinese labor. Our garments are made on the premises by skilled workmen.

THE TRUE CAUSE.

After hauling wool to The Dalles our sheepmen suddenly became aware that there is no sale for it there any more than here. The Dalles is not a wool market. After it is hauled there it must be shipped to market and very often no doubt goes back over the O. R. & N. through Grant, Arlington and Pendleton. If The Dalles people would put in woolen mills then they might lay claim to furnishing a market for wool, but under the present circumstances all they can claim is that wool buyers can be found at The Dalles to buy the wool, all of which can be done at Arlington. Hereafter Gilliam county sheepmen, as well as those from eastern Klickitat, will haul their wool to Arlington unless The Dalles can make it more of an object to haul to that city than has been done this year. An open river to the east, as well as to the west, would do wonders toward making The Dalles a market for wool. At present they have no competing transportation lines to the east, and in that respect are no better off than we are at Arlington.

This from the Arlington Record is amusing. Of course it is to be expected that our neighboring city would not look kindly upon the encroachments made by The Dalles in securing wool from territory formerly controlled by other places, but the railings of the Record show a lack of perception of the real causes. It is true little or no wool has been sold in The Dalles thus far, and it is possible none will be for some time. The Boston markets are glutted with foreign products to such an extent that the supply is far greater than the demand. This is the direct result of the Wilson bill, and The Dalles is no more to blame for it than Arlington.

When, however, the market does open it will be found that the difference in prices offered here and elsewhere will contain a wide margin. Last year wool sold in The Dalles for twelve cents, when the best that competing points in the interior could offer was nine. The same condition relatively will result this season as soon as any movement begins. The influence of The Dalles as a wool center, however great it may be, cannot counteract the effects of Democratic legislation.

One criticism of the Record is, however, clearly right. In connection with other advantages as a wool center, The Dalles should have a woolen and scouring mill. Pendleton has stolen a march upon us in this regard, and is reaping a consequent advantage.

The Record is wrong again when it says we have no competing transportation lines to the east, and in this respect are no better off than Arlington. This is fallacious. The Dalles, Portland and Astoria Navigation Co. has brought to The Dalles the benefits of all the competing transportation lines which center at Portland. The Northern Pacific, the Southern, the Great Northern and the Union Pacific, all are competing factors for our business which before the institution of the boat line was controlled alone by the last named road.

If the price of wool is to be low this year, all the more reason why the growers should bring their products to The Dalles and obtain the higher figures which will be offered here.

While the advantages possessed by this point could be increased through the establishment of a woolen mill, yet without that institution they are greater than those possessed by any city in the Northwest.

Dr. Darrin Well Known.

Mr. Editor:—Having noticed the arrival of Dr. Darrin at the Umatilla house, I wish to state to the public what he did for my father, (now residing in Boyd, Oregon), seven years ago. For months he had been sorely afflicted with a terrible pain in the ear and head, causing restlessness, deafness and insomnia. He was nearly crazy with pain, and all remedies failed to cure. He was induced to go to Dr. Darrin, then in Portland. In a few weeks he came home a cured man, all by the effects of electricity as administered by Dr. Darrin. I am in business at 110 Second street, this city, and will gladly answer any questions.
