SOME SUBSTANTIAL REASONS.

A report made to congress in 1834 gave some substantial reasons why the monetary system of the country should be based upon a single standard. That standard should consist of the metal which has been found best to suit the purpose. Gold has never fluctuated in value to the extent that other metals have, and has been adopted by the great nations of the world as the best standard of value. Under the gold standard bi-metalism is possible since both metals can circulate together. Under a silver standard there will be silver monometalism. The report of the commission, which follows, is as applicable to the situation today as it was in 1834:

"That gold or silver is the only sound, invariable and perfect currency that human wisdom has devised."

"That one metal may be selected with a certain assurance of finding in the metal chosen such proportion of the entire amount of the money of commerce as their exchangeable commodities bear to the total amount of merchandise produced."

"If both metals are preferred, the like relative proportion of the aggregate of the metallic currency will be possessed, subject to frequent changes from gold to silver and vice versa, according to the variations in the relative value of these metals."

"That the desideratum in the monetary system is a standard of uniform value; they (the committee) cannot ascertain that both metals have ever circulated simultaneously, concurrently, and indiscriminately in any country where there are banks of money dealers; and they entertain the conviction that the nearest approach to an invariable standard is its establishment in one metal, which metal shall compose exclusively the currency of the country."

Hence, it concludes, "That there are inherent and incurable defects in the system which regulates the standard of value in both gold and silver, its instability as a measure of contracts, and mutability as the practical currency of a particular nation, are serious imperfections. Whilst the impossibility of maintaining both metals in concurrent, simultaneous, or promiscuous circulation appears to be clearly ascertained."

"That the standard being fixed in one metal is the nearest approach to invariableness, and precludes the necessity of further legislative interference."

"That if it be deemed advisable to maintain both gold and silver coins in steady circulation, and to preserve silver as the measure of commerce and of contracts, gold must be restricted to small payments." (And vice versa if gold shall be the measure.)

A communication published on another page will amuse as it will fail to instruct those who read it. It is the argument of one who believes that by the independent action of this government the value of silver can be doubled. The arguments he advances can be applied to copper, iron, or any other metal with equal force. He admits the charge of insincerity of purpose which is made against the free silver advocates by saying that the silver men want the privilege of taking sixty cents worth of silver to the mint and having it stamped a dollar. Such a plea needs nor deserves no answer. The communication is printed merely to show to what lengths of folly a man will go who assumes his premises and argues from them. There must be but one standard of value, and experience has shown gold to be the best. Despite all statements to the contrary, this country has enjoyed its greatest period of prosperity since 1873, the time when, according to "Truthseeker," the "great crime" was committed.

None But Ayer's at the World's Fair. Ayer's Sarsaparilla enjoys the extraordinary distinction of having been the only blood purifier allowed on exhibit at the world's fair, Chicago. Manufacturers of other sarsaparillas sought by every means to obtain a showing of their goods, but they were all turned away under the application of the rule forbidding the entry of patent medicines and nostrums. The decision of the world's fair authorities in favor of Ayer's Sarsaparilla was in effect as follows: "Ayer's Sarsaparilla is not a patent medicine. It does not belong to the list of nostrums. It is here on its merits."
