

TURNING GRAY AND THREATENED WITH BALDNESS

The Danger is Averted by Using
AYER'S HAIR VIGOR

"Nearly forty years ago, after some weeks of sickness, my hair turned gray and began falling out so rapidly that I was threatened with immediate baldness. Hearing Ayer's Hair Vigor highly spoken of, I commenced using this preparation, and was so well satisfied with the result that I have never tried any other kind of dressing. It stopped the hair from falling out, stimulated a new growth of hair, and kept the scalp free from dandruff. Only an occasional application is now needed to keep my hair of good, natural color. I never hesitate to recommend any of Ayer's medicines to my friends."—Mrs. H. M. HAIGHT, Avoca, Neb.

ISAAC SWEARINGEN KILLED.

Shot Down in the Presence of Wife and Children by John H. Campbell.

The Prineville Review tells the following story of the murder of Isaac Swearingen by John Campbell, which occurred Saturday, July 4th:

Isaac C. Swearingen and family have lived on Newsom creek for the past 10 years. The family consisted of the father, mother and three daughters, the eldest between 16 and 17 years of age. Domestic trouble had occurred in this family, which caused the separation of the father from his wife and children, he going to a small cabin on the ranch and residing there while he permitted the family to continue in their home.

He was in Prineville the day before his death and arrived home Friday evening about 11 o'clock and went up to his cabin. When he arrived in the cabin he found John Gibson and family who remained until morning. In the morning the Gibsons and Swearingen went to the barn of Swearingen, which is about ninety yards from the house in which Mrs. Swearingen and family live, and got some provision, John Gibson remaining with Swearingen, helping him to fix up for his harvest. They were engaged in fixing up a mower when Swearingen went up to his cabin and got a Winchester rifle, returning to the barn, he put the gun down and went on with his work. Previous to this he had gone to the house and got a pan in order to divide some provisions with Mr. Gibson. After he had worked awhile he wanted a drink and wanted Gibson to go with him and get it. Gibson refused to go. He then picked up his gun, started to the front door and said to his wife, who met him here: "If he's here I am going to kill him?" She replied, "He's here." Campbell stayed all night at Mrs. Swearingen's and his horse was still tied at the fence that morning when Swearingen and Gibson were working at the barn.

Swearingen on receiving the above reply entered the house and his wife attempted to take the gun away from him and they scuffled through the house, which consists of several rooms, on to the back porch, both retaining a hold on the gun. Then Campbell, who had been in the bed room near the front door appeared in the door opening on to the porch, while the youngest daughter, Myrtle, 12 years old, was begging him "not to go to the door—" "Don't shoot" and like expressions, and at the same time tried to keep him back. When he appeared at the door Campbell said, "Ike, if you have anything against me we will settle it now." At the same time, according to Mrs. S.—testimony, Swearingen jerked the gun from her hands and cocked and leveled it on Campbell, who stood in the door. She stated further, that Campbell drew his pistol after he was covered with the Winchester and shot Swearingen, the ball entering the breast near the right shoulder, between the first and second ribs, and coming out 4 inches lower and to the left of the spine, and at the inquest, Dr. Belknap cut the bullet out from under the lower of the shoulder blade. The gun was a 45-calibre Colts. John Gibson immediately ran to the house and at the gate met Campbell and the family, Campbell remarking "John, it was a mighty hard thing to do, by G—d, I had to do it to save myself." Swearingen was found standing on the edge of the porch holding to a post for support. He said to Gibson: "John, he's killed me. I'm dying, John, I'm dying. He was behind the door." And to another party he said: "He shot me down like a dog." The Winchester was not to be seen when Gibson appeared on the scene. The gun had been removed by Campbell, so Mrs. Swearingen testified. Why after shooting a man he should take the gun and give it to the wife was not fully explained, and this is one of the mysteries of the case. She testified that she had taken the gun from him on other occasions, but she could not do it this time.

TOO ENGLISH, YOU KNOW.

Stilted Phrases Do Not Sound Well in Children's Mouths.

The Transcript has been appealed to in a matter that has proved perplexing in other families than that of the mother who asks for advice. It is the question of teaching children to refrain from saying: "Yes, sir," and "No, sir," and have them repeat the name of the person addressed in replying, as, "Yes, Mrs. Smith," "No, mamma," and the like. English children are taught that this is correct, the reason assigned over there being that the endlessly reiterated "Sir and 'Ma'am" belong to the servants and tradespeople, and is indicative of inferiority. As the correspondent points out, however, in France, where class distinctions also exist, the monsieur and madame are not left off in polite society. It is laborious, as many will testify, both to the small child and his listener, to hear the struggles with his manners in this respect. He is often not sure of the new name, and in his effort to do as he has been told the artless talk of the child becomes priggish and cumbersome, or if he abandons the attempt altogether, his "Yes" and "No" sound curt and unmannerly. A compromise that has been known to be effective is to teach the children of a household to use: "Yes, mamma," "No, papa," "Yes, Uncle Ned," and so on, with the familiar names of the family connection, leaving the "Ma'ams" and "Sirs" for the strangers who may come. This distinction, says the mother who offers it, is for the children while they are young. When they are in their teens it is easy to make them understand the little niceties of courteous speech and follow them correctly.

In summing up the matter, to refer again to the Boston controversy, this paragraph is used: "No doubt there is such a thing as being too lavish in our following of English manners, and the listener is half inclined to think that this may be one of the good many matters in which it might have been just as well to declare our independence as in the matter of paying taxes on tea."—Boston Transcript.
