"It is immaterial, in my judgment, whether the sheep grower receives any benefit from the tariff or not."

Whether he does or does not, I am for free wool."—Extract from speech of William J. Bryan in the house of representatives when the Wilson bill was under consideration.

WHAT BRYAN REPRESENTS.

Bryan stands before the country as the candidate of three parties—the Democratic, the Populist and the National Silver party. The last named is of little consequence as a political organization, and its aims and objects are included in the platforms of the other two.

The declaration of principles which the Democratic convention enunciated has rightly been considered as carrying with it anarchistic tendencies, but bad as it is, it does not go to the extent of the Populist platform. The two platforms agree as to free silver, but the Populists go farther and demand a sufficient increase of the circulating medium to "restore the just level of prices and labor." That would mean an abnormally large issue of paper money or depreciated coin, which are other names for inflation, and inflation means wholesale robbery and ultimate bankruptcy. It is a reckless policy and would not only cover us with shame before other nations, but bring a series of disasters upon us, destroying a confidence in our financial system which would bring about its overthrow. Nothing worse could befall a nation than to break down its respect for commercial and financial integrity.

The Populists demand the government ownership and control of railways and telegraphs—a proposal which would involve serious considerations and extend paternalism in government to a dangerous degree. They declare for an income tax and denounce the adverse decision of the supreme court "an arraignment of one of the most respectable tribunals in the civilized world by a popular assembly led by turbulent spirits, entitled of course to have an opinion on such a profound subject, but not entitled to command respect for it;" and they condemn the bond issues as unnecessary and without authority.

The Populists seek little less than a revolution, and they seek to tie the hands of the United States courts so that the men who lead in the riots might be placed beyond their jurisdiction.

The Democratic platform is bad enough, but the Populist is far worse and this is the platform upon which Bryan stands. Will these dangerous doctrines be accepted by the American people? Not unless the majority is bereft of common sense.

The average annual revenue under the McKinley law was $183,000,000; under the Wilson bill $156,000,000. This is but one phase of the question since the damage to the country through the importation of foreign goods and the consequent loss to American labors cannot be estimated in numbers.

Do the American people want a return of prosperity or do they not? It would seem from the way some are shouting for Bryan that a return of good times had better be put off indefinitely. The panic through which we have been passing since 1893 will suffer in comparison with what we shall experience in case Bryan be elected.
