WAYSIDE GLEANINGS.

Random Observations and Local Events of Lesser Magnitude.

The game season opens September 1st. There will be a meeting of the Macabees this evening.

Jerome Laner plead guilty to simple assault and was fined $25 by Justice Filloon this morning.

The 10-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lemon was buried this afternoon. The funeral took place from the house on the hill.

The public schools of the city will open a week from Monday. This will be the first Monday in September, which falls on September 7th.

The Wyoming Republicans have nominated a woman for one of their presidential electors. Her husband being a Democrat, she may have to sue him for non-support.

In some parts of the East the farmers are so wrought on politics that they paint signs on their houses, barns or gates to show how they stand on the money question.

There are scarcely any vacant houses in the city. Building, although it has been reasonably brisk all summer, fails to keep up with the requirements. Tenement houses would yield a good return on the money invested.

A notice is posted up on the postoffice door asking everyone to watch out for Archie Beers, a 11-year-old runaway from Chicago. The picture accompanies the notice and he don't look to be any more valuable than the ordinary kid of that age.

All that was mortal of R. G. Closter was laid to rest this morning by the Masonic fraternity, of which the deceased was a prominent member. The Odd Fellows also attended in a body. Dr. Leavens of the Cascades came up to attend the funeral.

There has not been a line of reliable news—a tangible fact—so far which would enable anyone to say there is any gold whatever in the new so-called mining district of Lookout mountain in Skamania county. Even the enthusiastic Timothy O'Sullivan confines himself to extraneous subjects, and has more to say concerning the people coming in than the finds anyone has ever made.

It is reported that the game law is being recklessly violated by hunters who, instead of waiting for the open season for Chinese pheasants, are slaughtering them daily. A farmer who came to town yesterday said that he believed he heard five hundred shots fired during the forenoon. He said hundreds of pheasants are being killed. Oregon has good wholesome game laws and they should be enforced. The game warden should take prompt steps to prevent this wholesale violation of law.—Albany Democrat.

McClure's magazine for September will contain the first report ever published of Abraham Lincoln's famous "Lost Speech," delivered at Bloomington, before the first Republican state convention held in Illinois. "I never witnessed such a scene before or since," says Joseph Medill, editor of the Chicago Tribune, who was a member of the convention and writes an introduction to the report of the speech describing the occasion.

One of the neatest and altogether the most appropriate of the many campaign badges is a McKinley button originated by F. R. Mellis, of Baker City. It consists of a diamond-shaped metal plate, half an inch long on each side, one-half of which is gold and the other half silver, the back of both being gold, and across the face in blue enamel letters is the word "McKinley." This teaches the Republican doctrine of maintenance of the parity of gold and silver, and the use of both metals as money, the silver being backed by gold. These campaign badges promise to become very popular.

E. McNeil has filed a complaint against J. G. and I. N. Day for the replevin of engine No. 291. The Day Bros. claim they bought it from the Union Pacific and McNeil claims it was not theirs to sell or at any rate it belongs to the O. R. & N. Co. since the road has passed from the hands of a receiver. Sheriff Driver went down today to locate the engine, but the nearest he came to it was the number 291 marked with a lead pencil below the headlight. Otherwise the present number of that engine is 1. An interesting suit will probably result.

The Spokesman-Review is circulating a superbly beautiful publication entitled "A Race for Empire and Other True Tales of the Northwest." The resident of the East into hands the book may fall will be astonished to find that the "wild and woolly" West contains so much substantial architecture, so many great industrial enterprises and so grand and varied natural scenery as is here represented by the engravings from life with which the book is as full as a plum cake is of raisins. The publication is among the very finest typographically which art has yet produced, and may well be preserved as one of the best produced during the Nineteenth century. The only disappointment is that a Chicago printing establishment did the work instead of some coast firm.

FROM CRATER LAKE.

The Mazamas Are Returning From a Highly Successful Outing.

W. G. Steel writes to the Oregonian a very interesting account of the Mazamas at Crater Lake:

Friday morning the heavy fall of smoke that had obscured Crater lake was gone, and Mazama day broke clear and beautiful. During the forenoon the club met in the crater of Wizard island, elected a number of new members and transacted such other business as was necessary. The afternoon was given up to strolls and climbs, and an audience of 250 attended the exercises about the camp fire. The meeting was opened by an excellent recitation by Miss Newman, and was followed by the president's address, at the close of which Miss Fay Fuller was introduced and recited an original poem on Crater lake; then, with a few appropriate words, broke a bottle of water distilled from the snow of Wizard island's crater and officially bestowed the name of the club on the hitherto unnamed mountain. She was quickly followed by the lusty club yell and the explosion of firecrackers and Winchester rifles. Mr. Wilbur was then introduced as toastmaster, and the following responses were given: "Mount Mazamas," by J. S. Diller; "That Tired Feeling," by Professor Everman; "The Forest Trees," by Dr. C. Hart Merriam; "The Poetry of Nature," by Captain O. C. Applegate; "The Cascade Range Forest Reserve," by W. G. Steel. Professor Everman gave the result of his search for fish food in the lake, of which he reported an abundance.

The entire party then adjourned to the walls of the lake, and gave a signal to Mr. C. C. Lewis and Professor Hutchinson, who were on the island, and immediately a brilliant red light shot forth in the night air, and again the old crater was ablaze. Aside from the large number of campers around the lake, quite a number of Indians had come up from the agency, and were greatly delighted to see a fire that destroyed no timber. So, it came to pass that a day of general rejoicing closed in a halo of glory. There never was a happier band of mountaineers than gathered on the walls of the lake to watch the brilliant light on Wizard island. So far no incident, however trivial, has occurred to mar the pleasure of our party. The entire trip has been one succession of successes and unlooked-for pleasures have followed each other in quick succession. Six hundred people have visited the lake, of whom over forty were members of the Klamath Falls Crater Lake Club. On Saturday morning Mr. and Miss Pitcock, Mrs. Middleton, Miss Leadbetter, Messrs. Parsons, Marmon, Scott and the writer left camp on the way home. I left the remainder of the party at Prospect, and walked to Central Point, 45 miles distant, in time to catch Sunday evening's north-bound train. The others will arrive in Portland Wednesday, and those who left camp Monday morning will get here on Thursday. So closed one of the most successful outings ever attempted, and every one seemed sorry to seek again the ways of city life and civilization.
