PROTECTION AND FREE COINAGE

The merchant and the producer who resides within our city limits pays taxes upon his investment; the transient peddler and hawker should be compelled, if he is not, to pay a license for the privilege of selling the goods he has accumulated or manufactured elsewhere. This is the essential principle of the protective tariff, and it has been demonstrated so many times that the foreign producer pays the tax that there should be no need of further discussion. Under a high tariff in the United States the tin manufacturers of Wales made nothing and the potato producers of Canada and Nova Scotia had no market for the great surplus of potatoes they produce, because they could not pay the importation tax and make money. Our Democratic silverite denounces the unfairness of protecting the sheep industry and refusing to help, by law, the silver mine owner. The Republican party is willing to protect the mine owner in the same way he does the sheep man, but it will never consent to say to the mine owner or any other class, you may compel your creditor to take a coin bearing the government stamp which is of less value than the dollar you received. It has always been and always will be a fundamental principle of the Republican party to pay, as we agreed to pay.

The advocate of free coinage insists that the demand to be created by a free coinage law will enhance the price of silver and bring it to or near a parity with gold. If this be so how will laborers and farmers be able to get it any easier than they can now get gold? But the experience of France disproves this contention. Prior to 1853 France was on a silver basis, gold having gone out of circulation because of a premium of about 14 per cent; in 1853 a demand for silver for export from Europe to India raised the commercial value of silver to a premium and France began the coinage of gold. For five years she coined 80 per cent of the world's product and yet gold during that time depreciated one per cent. In 1859 she coined $130,000,000, which was $10,000,000 in excess of the entire product of the world for that year, and yet the price continued to fall and at the close of that year was 2 per cent below par of silver.

In the face of this the Popocrat and Populist declare that we can be independent of the world and raise the value of silver 47 per cent by opening our mints. A man upon a railroad track may check the speed of an approaching express train, but he is quite apt to get hurt in the experiment.

If the election of Bryan will be a great blessing to the business interests of the country why does the anticipation of that result not have a beneficial result? If Bryan's election will enhance the value of silver why does silver not have an upward tendency now? Silver, a few days ago, fell about 3 per cent, and all kinds of business is now paralyzed by the feeling that Bryan's election is among the possibilities.

Our Popocratic contemporaries sneeringly suggest that Republican orators are just now extremely anxious for the welfare of American laborers. They have not yet opened their eyes to the fact that lack of employment and distress among the laboring classes is preceded always by lack of employment of capital. They forget that every interest of capital and the capitalist is enhanced when labor is profitably employed.

Ex-President Harrison makes the financial question so plain that none who wish to understand need be confused. There is very little talk about crowns or thorns, or bowing to the yoke of foreign power. But it abounds in reason, logic, common sense and the wisdom of an experienced statesman.

The actual ratio between gold and silver as fixed by law is not 16 to 1, but 15.988 to 1. Why this niceity of fractions? Why not 15 to 1? multiples of five are so much more readily calculated.

We wonder what the State Portage Commission had in view when they asked the opinion of the attorney general concerning the rights of the state in the Cascade Locks reservation.
