THE CRIME OF 1873.

So much has been written and said, which to a fair mind is conclusive that the act of 1873 was thoroughly understood in and out of congress at the time of its passage, that we supposed the rankest Populist had let go of that crank. But only a few days ago Mr. Bryan reiterated the oft refuted statement, in one of his appeals, to popular prejudice.

The facts are that the bill was before congress almost three years. It was first introduced April 25, 1870. It was prepared by John J. Knox, deputy comptroller of the currency, not by money lenders or brokers. Before it was introduced it had been submitted to boards of trade, chambers of congress, government officials and experts in finance, and when sent to congress it was accompanied by a communication which distinctly stated that its provisions discontinued the coinage of the 412 1/2 grain silver dollar, and also by the replies which Mr. Knox had received from the bodies and persons to whom it had been submitted. The passage of the bill was recommended by three different reports of the secretary of the treasury, those of 1871, 1872 and 1873. It passed the senate January 10, 1871, and then went to the house and was printed January 13, 1871. It passed the house May 27, 1872, having been there amended. The amendments necessitated its return to the senate. It again passed the senate with amendments January 17, 1873; it then went to a conference committee whose report was adopted and it finally passed both houses February 12, 1873. It was printed thirteen different times and the debates in the senate occupy 66 columns of the Congressional Globe and in the house 78 columns. The bill was debated nearly two whole days in January, 1872. Congressman Kelley, of Pennsylvania, during that debate said: "I would like to follow the example of England and make a wide difference between our gold and silver coins, and make the gold dollar uniform with the French system of weights, taking the grain as the unit."

Congressman Hooper, of Massachusetts, in a long speech on this bill in February, 1872, referring to the discontinuance of the silver dollar, said: "The silver dollar of 412 1/2 grains, by reason of its bullion or intrinsic value being greater than its nominal value, long since ceased to be a coin of circulation, and is melted by manufacturers of silverware."

Congressman Potter, of New York, opposed the bill, claiming: "This bill provides for the making of changes in the legal tender coin of the country, and for substituting as legal tender coin of only one metal, instead, as heretofore, of two."

Other members in both houses called attention to the fact that the bill discontinued the free coinage of the silver dollar.

We are informed by Mr. Bryan that a number of congressmen have testified that they did not understand the bill. The inevitable conclusion is that these men were asleep during the debates or were intellectually unqualified to be in congress, or are now prevaricating. If Bryan is elected upon the proposition that the act of 1873 was "surreptitiously" or "by a conspiracy" passed through congress he will be elected by a falsehood.

In yesterday's CHRONICLE the figures showing the output of gold and silver should have been for the United States and not for the world as stated. The world's product of gold 1792 to 1873, coinage value, is $3,582,212,000, an average per annum of $44,224,839. The world's product of silver during the same period was $2,711,442,000 or $33,474,600 per annum. From 1873 to 1893 the total output of gold was $3,206,505,000 or $110,325,250, and of silver $2,346,087,000 or $117,304,350 per annum. These figures are taken from government statistics and answer the whole free coinage argument.

From 1853 to 1859 France had practically a single silver standard by reason of having over valued silver in its coinage about 1 1/2 per cent. In 1859 a demand in England for silver to ship to the orient raised the price above the French coinage ratio and France went to the gold standard, and notwithstanding her enormous use of gold for coinage purposes, over 80 per cent of the world's products, its value as compared with silver continued to decrease. Will coinage of the United States change the price in view of the enormous amount annually produced?

We wish the Democratic papers, which have been publishing alleged extracts from the Mexican Financier, would publish the interview of the New York Sun with Jose Y. Limantour, Mexican minister of finance, published in today's Oregonian.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers, that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials. Address: F. J.
