OUR CIRCULATION.

We have in circulation about $498,449,000 in gold and gold certificates, about $443,444,000 in silver and silver certificates, and about $567,840,000 in other currency. Drive the gold out of circulation by permitting it to go to a premium, and the result will be a contraction of our currency by over 33 per cent. But "what will we get in exchange for our gold?" "Will we not get for that gold twice as much silver?" These questions are the only solution of the difficulty we have seen or heard.

THE CHRONICLE thinks we may get some silver, but a great deal more in securities upon which we have borrowed money in Europe. These securities, if due, will be collected, and the money paid to take them up will not be reinvested here, but will be shipped to Europe. If the securities are not due, they will be placed upon the markets and those interested in the properties will be forced to buy them in for self protection. This collection and selling of American securities in Europe has been one great cause of the shipment of gold out of the country since the silver agitation began. The capital which built our railroads is very largely European capital; the capital which has developed our mines and other resources has, much of it, been borrowed in Europe by the sale of stocks and bonds. As these mature, or the investors become alarmed, the investment is withdrawn and the money shipped to Europe, and actually withdrawn from circulation.

But if silver should be shipped in, as is claimed, it would require many years to coin and get into circulation an amount equal to the gold coin now in circulation. The time required for this is estimated by the mint officials to be fifteen years.

Free coinage of silver at 16 to 1 will drive gold to a premium and keep it there so long as the bullion value of silver is less than $1.29 per ounce. We think this is not seriously controverted, even by free coinage advocates. Wages are always the last to be affected by an upward tendency in prices; the employer of labor will continue to pay the same wages, but will pay in the depreciated money. Thus labor will be paid in "53-cent dollars," not necessarily in dollars worth 53 cents, but in the dollars which are now worth 53 cents in bullion, and will then be worth only their bullion value—and this is all that is meant by the assertion that laborers will be paid in 53-cent dollars. THE CHRONICLE is of the opinion that the election of Bryan will drive gold to a premium at once, the disparity being perhaps slight at first, and increasing as the probability of free coinage legislation increases.

When the mints are opened and the bullion owner is permitted to present his bullion and receive his dollars, he will reap a profit not necessarily of 47 cents, but of a sum equal to the difference between the actual bullion value of silver and the coinage value, whatever that difference may be.
