LET US ORGANIZE NOW.

The western and southern portions of the state are well along in the campaign. Everywhere the Republicans are organizing and carrying on an active campaign. Eastern Oregon has hardly begun active campaigning; our own county is less active than other portions of the state this side the Cascades. A call has been made for a meeting Friday evening, and we urge upon every Republican and every Democrat who expects to vote the Republican ticket this fall to be present at that meeting and join hands in an earnest, active effort to make McKinley's majority in Oregon as large proportionately as the Republican majority in Maine.

There now remains less than seven weeks in which to do the work. Wasco county, where more wool is handled direct from the producer than in any other market in the United States, must not be indifferent in this contest. Let Friday night be the beginning of the most active campaign ever carried on. No Republican can be indifferent and do his duty.

TWO NEW YORK DEMOCRATS.

There are two Sheehans in New York, John C., who is high in the councils of Tammany, and who, like many other men in times past in his political situation, care very little how they get to be bosses of New York City, so long as they get there. John stands now for Populism. The other, William F., is one of the leaders of the Democracy of the state, a member of the Democratic National Committee, and a man of great influence. He says, in his recently published letter, among other sensible things: "For the first time within my memory we have a candidate of a so-called Democratic convention appealing not to the patriotism and Democracy of our people; not to their conscience and intelligence; but to their prejudices and dislikes."

If the organized Democracy of the state reverses its position (of June), stands where it should not stand, pulls down the banner of Democracy and hoists the flag of Populism, I will not continue to represent it."

These two men are typical of their kind—one for the spoils, regardless of the means; the other for principle and good government.

A prominent ex-Democrat of this county; one whom the Populists have now "got," was heard to remark that the result in Maine was the strongest argument yet produced for the election of Bryan; that Maine, like Vermont, is a state of money-lenders, and it simply shows how the eastern moneyed men were set on oppressing the masses. The gentleman either never visited Maine or Vermont, and never took pains to read about them; or else he was trying to mislead his hearers and give them a little flat consolation. The fact is, the people of Vermont are almost entirely engaged in agricultural pursuits. It has only two cities, and neither of these has a population of over 25,000. The people of Maine are, with the exception of the ship building industry, engaged very largely in agriculture and lumbering business. From neither have they become so rich as to be lending money. It is not strange that one who knows nothing of the state except that Sewell lives there, should conclude that it is a state of money-lenders; but there is only one Sewell there of the kind who started out to run with Bryan.

Bryan's whole campaign lives upon the prejudice which he and his followers are endeavoring to create against capital. Do he and his friends forget that capital is as essential to labor as labor is to capital, and that nothing will drive capital out of active employment so quickly as the sentiment they are trying to create? Every man in the United States today, outside of the silver mine owners, or those who are in a position to reap a direct benefit by depreciating our currency, and are dishonest enough to take advantage of such position—who has accumulated capital is protesting against the election of Bryan. Capital has been, ever since the Chicago convention, and is now, going out of circulation. Should the condition which is now only feared become a reality, the United States will experience such hard times as that even the period of Cleveland's administration will be looked back to as the "good old times."

From June 1, 1866, to November 1, 1867, a Republican administration decreased the national debt $247,987,295; during the next three years it paid off $300,000,000 more, and at the same time decreased the taxes $140,000,000. From 1870 to the close of Harrison's administration it paid off the debt at the average rate of $72,000,000 per annum. During all this time the country was more prosperous than any in the world. Our per capita circulation increased, notwithstanding the enormous increase in our population; our savings banks were greater at the close of Harrison's administration than ever, and a greater percentage of our people were employed at remunerative wages.

Before the Chicago convention Wasco county warrants were readily sold in The Dalles at one per cent premium; yesterday they sold at 30 per cent discount. The condition of the county has not changed for the worse; but men who have saved a few dollars and desire to invest it, are not anxious to take any chances of receiving depreciated dollars for dollars of the present standard. We suppose Lombard street has again conspired with Wall street.

In 1874 Senator Stewart said: "I do not care how much you discuss it, or how many resolutions you pass, they do not make any difference; you must come to the same conclusion that all other people have—that gold is recognized as the universal standard of value. It is the measure that must be used." He was right then; but he was not then engaged in unloading his silver mine upon the American people.
