Never was a more grievous wrong done the farmers of our country than that so unjustly inflicted during the past three years upon the wool growers. Although among our most useful citizens, their interests have been practically destroyed. —McKinley's letter of acceptance.

FALLACIOUS IN EVERY PARTICULAR.

The following clipping is sent us by one who does not clearly see its fallacy:

A Michigan farmer sends the following to his home paper, which comes very close to the mark: "General Alger is right. The price of everything else has gone down with silver. I know this because I can take fifty cents' worth of silver today and buy as much hog, as much cow, as much wool, as much butter, as much egg, and, in fact, as much of any farm produce as I could with one dollar's worth of silver when I bought my farm in 1870, but when I come to make a payment on my mortgage, which is not altogether wiped out, I still have to put up one dollar's worth of silver (a gold dollar) to pay one dollar's worth of mortgage. In other words, everything my farm produces, except the mortgage, has gone down half in value. That is why I am a silver Republican, and why the man who holds the mortgage is a gold Republican. Hurrah for Bryan!"

Its fallacies are numerous. First, General Alger never said, and it is not true, that the price of everything else has gone down with silver. Second, Michigan farmers in 1870 did not sell produce for silver, but for paper money worth 75 cents in gold. Third, Michigan farmers in 1870 did not give gold mortgages; they received for their mortgages 75-cent currency. Fourth, the farmer does not now have to put up one dollar's worth of silver to pay one dollar's worth of mortgage; fifty-three cents' worth of silver now pays one dollar's worth of gold mortgage. A silver dollar pays just as much of the mortgage as it did in 1870, and will continue to do so unless Bryan is elected. It will drop to its bullion value the moment the treasury refuses to pay gold when gold is demanded by the creditors of the government. Then the farmer whose farm is under a gold mortgage will indeed have to pay one dollar's worth of silver for every one dollar's worth of mortgage; and then will he curse the day Bryan was elected.

There is further fallacy in this, i. e., that the increased purchasing power of a dollar of today is not considered in the least. It is fallacious all through.

A national campaign is usually a great educator, and on that account a great benefit to all contending partisans. The result of this contest will be, upon the one hand, the dissimulation of a vast amount of valuable information; but, upon the other, the excitement of a bitter prejudice, which will require years to allay. There is no stronger proof of Bryan's narrowness and incapacity than his appeals to the prejudice of the people and the excitement of hatred among ignorant people. He is no friend of the people whom he is trying to excite; he is simply a polished sand lot orator.

No man since Washington has had as complete control over the policy and destiny of a nation as did Bismarck in Germany from 1871 to 1885. No one man ever did more to bring a nation into a position of power, national importance and prosperity than did Bismarck. He it was who established and maintained the gold standard in Germany, and during the many years he ruled that great nation he never advised a return to the silver basis. His advice to the United States, therefore, to go to the silver basis should be viewed with caution. The fact is, he is still jealous of Germany and Germany's greatness, and no man would be more pleased than Bismarck to see the United States crippled commercially.

The Democratic papers quote, in support of their contention that the Act of 1873 was clandestinely passed, a portion of the Congressional Record of May 28, 1873, "showing the evident anxiety of Chairman Hooper to force through his bill, and the actual misrepresentation resorted to by him to accomplish his purpose." This is another lie; the act known by Popocrats as "the crime" became a law February 12, 1873.

There is a heap of wind down South just now. Eolus has not only sent thither his windy son from the banks of the Platte, but he has turned loose all the winds at once, and it remains to be seen whether the boy will blow back the uncontrolled forces which have escaped the old gentleman, or he himself will be blown out. It is a contest of wind, so far as Bryan is concerned.

There were no appeals to passion or prejudice in Senator Mitchell's speech, but there was a very strong appeal to the patriotism of his audience. The financial question, as well as all other issues, was discussed with the utmost of candor and fairness, as well as great ability.
