WAYSIDE GLEANINGS.

Random Observations and Local Events of Lesser Magnitude.

Twenty-four new pupils came to school this week.

Latest style trimmed hats from $1 to $5 at the Elite Millinery Parlors.

The local train will hereafter arrive at 11:50 a. m. and leave at 1 p. m.

For big melons, big squashes, fat ducks, dressed or undressed chickens, call on "Dad" Butts.

No. 1 was several hours late this morning, caused by some hot boxes and a delay on the Short Line.

The Regulator shipped 800 head of sheep yesterday from Lyle to the Cascades, sold to D. P. Ketchum.

Mr. Fred Bronson has fitted up a platform at Lyle to weigh wheat upon, the scales arriving there yesterday.

As we go to press we learn by telegram to Mr. M. A. Moody that General Geo. H. Williams will speak at the Vogt opera house Saturday night next.

The cape uniforms, Zouave costumes and gun torches arrived this morning from New York. They will probably see their first service Friday night.

The Enderby McKinley Club will meet at the lower 5-Mile schoolhouse Monday evening, Oct. 12th, at 7:30 p. m. There will be one or more speakers present to address the club. Everyone who will vote for McKinley and Hobart is requested to be present.

As the evenings grow longer and are more unpleasant, attention is again turned to the club rooms, where last night a number of ladies and gentlemen enjoyed the different sports afforded. We expect soon to chronicle some record-breaking bowling scores.

Mr. A. S. Mac Allister returned last evening from the locks. A new dredger is being built to supply the place of the Enterprise, which could not do the work. Eight courses of stone are yet to lay on the north side. An old scow is being fitted up to use in connection. The work is being pushed with all possible speed.

A curious fish for this coast was caught on a sturgeon hook this morning. It has a very frank open countenance, a genuine Bryan mouth, and has a slim tapering tail a good deal like the Democratic party. An old New Englander who viewed it said it was a Rock cod. If so it has come a long way to inform us of the result of the Maine election.

The rehearsals of Howell's farce, "The Garroters," are progressing rapidly under the charge of Miss Grubbs. It will certainly be the opportunity of a lifetime for the ladies of The Dalles to witness this laughable production. Tomorrow we will print the cast of characters, which will be somewhat of a mystery to unravel.

Marshal Lauer appointed Mr. Cameron to run in the cows, and up to 11 o'clock today he had impounded fourteen. He got into altercations with several owners and the day herder, but skillfully avoided trouble, at the same time chasing in cows. The town has been literally overrun with cattle at large, but the nuisance is now practically ended.

North was bound over to the grand jury under $250 bonds before Justice Filloon yesterday for indecent exposure. The witnesses were four little girls. A silly grin overspread the face of the defendant most of the time during the trial, and it is believed by some his mind is affected. Spectators were sensibly excluded from the court room while the trial was in progress.

Election notices were printed at THE CHRONICLE office this morning, informing the public that there will be a big election on Nov. 3d; that a president and vice-president of the United States will then be elected, and that the polls will be open from 8 a. m. to 6 p. m. Most of us have "hearn" that such an event is to occur, but the requirements of the law must be complied with.

An Indian woman named Caroline appeared at the sheriff's office today. She is trying to regain possession of a child that belonged in life to her brother. He was drowned at the mouth of Mill creek about two years ago while drunk. His wife then lived in adultery, it is said, with a certain colored man, he possessing a wife of his own. The child fell to Caroline, the sister of the drowned Indian, and she claims to have cared for it, and paid its doctor bills and living expenses. The colored individual came and got the child, and now Caroline is trying to get it back. The case may come up in court.

The Dalles is shamefully neglected in the matter of Republican speakers. There is not a Republican political address booked at the present time in The Dalles for the remainder of the campaign. The rest of the state is being carefully looked after by such prominent speakers as Hon. W. R. Ellis, T. T. Geer, Thos. H. Tongue, E. L. Smith and half a score of others, and The Dalles alone, which is capable of turning out an audience of 1,000 people, is overlooked by the state Republican committee.

Good speakers come to The Dalles and go out in the country to address an audience of 25 to 50 at some school house, while the Populists attempt to interest our large audiences with howlers like Clarno and Pennoyer and iguorami like Weatherford. We desire to register a protest.

MILLINERY OPENING.

The Beautiful Display Last Evening at the Elite Parlors.

The Elite millinery parlors, Mrs. M. E. Briggs, proprietress, were aglow last evening with an exquisite combination of colors, to which both nature and art contributed. The handsome rooms, in their gala dress, were thronged till late in the evening by the ladies of the city and vicinity, who desired to take a comprehensive, as well as a particular glance, at this season's fashions. The decorations were profuse. Potted plants and flowers were everywhere. The predominating colors this year are purple and green, and wherever the eye chanced to rest it was met by this fashionable and beautiful combination. Festoons of ivy and woodbine were draped along the walls, and the ceiling was twined with purple and green ribbons in handsome contrast. Displayed in all available places were the trimmed hats, fresh from the milliner's hands, and displaying to splendid advantage her trained and tasteful art. There was nothing visible suggestive of the styles of days ago, even in the recent past. Not an inch of space was spared for a last fall's hat, and indeed it would have looked sadly out of place, so radically different are this year's shapes and trimmings. The visitors were delighted with the display, which after all, gives ample scope for variety.

The Elite Millinery Parlors are always abreast of the times, and its proprietress evidently believes the ladies of The Dalles should have all the advantages of a metropolis in the matter of fashions. She carries on a carefully-conducted business, and has no old stock to close out, no bankrupt goods to palm off upon her patrons, because they can be purchased for fifty cents on the dollar. Owing to this principle of always being up to date, the Elite Parlors have easily attained the lead in The Dalles in the millinery line, a position which Mrs. Briggs re-established by the elegant opening last evening.

The Campaign of Education.

Mr. Weatherford is not what might be termed a ready speaker. He halted and stumbled, and spluttered and ranted, at the Baldwin opera house last evening, while following the usual lines of the new and populist doctrine of the Democratic party, until the more intelligent part of the audience assembled were sorry for his sake they were present to witness his discomfort. Weatherford should never enter a joint debate. There were a dozen men present last evening, who had they been allowed ten minutes, would have striven Mr. Weatherford's labored theories to the four winds. There was nothing new in his remarks, so far as his often obscure meaning could be figured out. He upheld the right of American citizens to criticize the supreme court; reiterated the long-since exploded theory that the federal government has no right to interfere with the rights of a state when that state is under the rule of a mob; and re-declared that international agreement for bimetalism is not to be desired nor sought. But all of these arguments are already familiar. The only mistake made by the Democratic campaign committee was in sending out such a poor declaimer as Weatherford, when there are hundreds of bright boys and girls in the land who can repeat the speech with all the arts and graces of the elocutionist, without the frequent repetitions, and without the awful and glaring errors both of rhetoric and grammar, which Mr. Weatherford inflicts upon a helpless audience.

Indian Love That Survives Youth.

An aged Indian couple is reported near the city trying to maintain life as best they may. They are said to be about 80 years old each. Contrary to all traditional Indian customs, the husband, who can speak good English, cares very tenderly for his aged wife. Indians usually regard their wives, when they become old, as cumbersome cattle, and their portion is neglect, sometimes abuse, which makes them an easy prey to death. The old couple spoken of do not follow the policy of their race, but are very regardful of the welfare of the other. They are having a hard time to make a live of it, but if the storms and exposures of the coming winter prove too severe for one of them, the survivor will mournfully attend to the proper funeral ceremony of the deceased. If they go together, it will be with a mutual look of love into each other's eyes as the film that death bequeaths grows over them.
