TO OUR WHEAT RAISERS.

Mr. Bryan's cause, so far as wheat farmers are concerned, had its only standing upon the oft-repeated proposition that the "demonetization of silver" by the act of 1873 has caused the depreciation in the price of wheat. In vain has been the argument that the price of wheat was determined by the inexorable laws of supply and demand; in vain have figures and facts been presented tending to show that neither free silver in India or Argentina, nor legislation in our own country, had anything to do with the price of wheat. Men would listen to no argument in support of the claim that over-production and under consumption could effect the price; the fact that the price of wheat and silver had fallen remained and was quite sufficient to satisfy many that the price of one follows the price of the other.

Today an actual demonstration is placed before us; a shortage in the crops in Europe and Asia creates a demand and the price of wheat rises rapidly and naturally. It is no sudden fluctuation, but a positive and healthy advance in price resulting from a demand. The supply is inadequate to meet the demand, and the thing happens which every Republican, and many of the Democratic papers and statesmen have declared would happen, regardless of silver, whenever the conditions were right.

Our Populist friends cannot avoid the force of the argument, and they do not want to. It is useless to say that it has not been claimed that the price of silver follows every fluctuation in the price of wheat. The contention has been, up to within two weeks of this time, that wheat followed the price of silver, regardless of the laws of supply and demand, and that the price of wheat would not advance until there was legislation in favor of silver. But suddenly wheat turns its back on silver, leaves it still sinking lower and lower, and its price rises to the natural level fixed by the laws of commerce, which everywhere and at all times govern the price of wheat, silver and all other commodities.

Newspapers would better serve the people and the cause of morality if they would forever banish the cartoon and the sensational illustration. The press of San Francisco is little better than the Police Gazette in this respect, as well as in the matter which is daily placed before the people as news; but other papers, making some claim to decency, are following the example of these greater, but less useful papers. The cartooning business is becoming absolutely disgusting to decent people; they make no friends for any cause or party; they cater to a depraved taste, and the United States mails should be closed to all papers which use them, as they are to obscene literature. If people must have such stuff, let them buy the papers which make no pretense of furnishing anything else, or if they cannot buy them, they can always borrow them at the barber shops.

The report that Pennoyer and Bourne have joined hands in compelling the policemen and gamblers of Portland to contribute to the campaign fund of the Popocrats would be incredible were it not for the fact that Bourne and Pennoyer have formed a partnership. That Bourne should be taken into the Popocratic camp for any purpose is sufficient evidence to ordinary men that he went in to do any dirty job necessary. Pennoyer had some reputation for honesty, but Bourne had none, and if he deemed the assessment of gambling houses a certain method of raising boodle, they would be assessed.

All silver coinage, except that of the silver dollar, was, by the act of 1853, placed in the hands of the government. From that time on up to 1873 there were coined in all $5,528,848 silver dollars. During the first ten years after the government took charge of the coinage of dollars, 1873 to 1883, we coined on an average of 16,918,662 per annum, or nearly three times as much as was coined in twenty years before the crime. If a large coinage of silver could make us prosperous, we ought to have been about sixty times as prosperous after 1873 as we were from 1853 to 1873.

Tillman never, by any words or acts, made any man a better citizen; patriotism is not in his line. His whole life has been devoted to stirring up discontent and bitter hatred. His weapon is a pitchfork, and with it he stirs up the debris which breeds political malaria. He is a coarse and vehement demagogue, whose work in Oregon will hurt the cause of the men who imported him.
