WAYSIDE GLEANINGS.

Random Observations and Local Events of Lesser Magnitude.

Hon. F. X. Schoonmaker tonight.

See H. Herbring's new advertisement in today's issue.

The Diamond mills paid 73 cents for wheat yesterday.

Hon. F. X. Schoonmaker at the Vogt opera house this evening.

Don't forget that Farmer Geer will speak Thursday night in The Dalles.

Mr. J. T. Peters is putting up two handsome dwelling houses on Fourth street. Mr. R. McNeil is the contractor.

Saltmarsh & Co. have received some full blood De Lane and Shropshire bucks for Kerr & Buckley and Faragher Bros.

A platform is to be erected at the courthouse corner, upon which Senator Tillman of South Carolina is to speak tonight.

George McClure was found guilty by a jury in Pendleton last week of an attempt to commit rape upon a Mrs. Fawcett.

The public schools will be closed on Friday next so that the pupils may attend the fair. All school children admitted free on that day.

Attention to politics should not totally distract the attention of citizens from the meeting Friday to arrange for a proper celebration for the opening of the Locks.

During the sickness of Harry C. Liebe the services of Mr. Richard Krumpf, a first-class watchmaker and jeweler, has been secured. All work entrusted to him will receive prompt attention.

Mr. Geo. Ernest Stewart leaves tonight for Dayton, Wash., where Judge Bennett is called to try the suit of Mrs. Walker against the railroad company for $40,000 for the killing of her husband.

Republican flag day will be Saturday, Oct. 31st. All over the union on this day flags will be placed upon all residences and places of business of sound money voters. It will be a combined demonstration unequalled of the kind in American history.

Orville Hendershot was arrested yesterday by Sheriff Driver on a charge of felony, and was taken to Portland today by Detective Cody. The offence with which he is charged is obtaining goods from a shoe store through the improper use of T. A. Hudson's name.

Hundreds of people have come in from the country to attend the political speaking at the Vogt opera house tonight, on which occasion Hon. F. X. Schoonmaker, a leading citizen of the great state of New Jersey, will expound the principles of the Republican party.

The principal stock exhibits made on the fair grounds so far is by Mr. Robt. Kelly. They consist of a fine Devon bull, cow and Percheron stallion valued at $2,000. The exhibits for the pavilion will not be placed until tomorrow, owing to the Schoonmaker speaking this evening.

Conductor Wall, of the overland train, who had the late fatal accident at Greens, south of Roseburg, is no longer in the Southern Pacific employ. Conductor Sam Veatch, lately in charge of the Salem local, has been given Wall's place on the overland, and Ed. Elder supplies Veatch's place on the Salem local.

A terrible accident occurred near 30-Mile, in Gilliam county, Sunday. A span of wild horses that were hitched to a wagon, in which were the wife and children of Will Davis, ran away, overturning the wagon. Two of the children were killed, and another fatally injured. In their flight, the horses ran against a tree breaking the wagon tongue, and turning the wagon over endwise. Mr. Davis was not in the wagon, but had tied the horses to a fence, from which they broke away.

Republicans of White Salmon.

Mr. F. W. Wilson returned last evening from White Salmon, where he made a political address of 90 minutes length before the Republican club there. Some 125 were in attendance. The previous afternoon, also was given over to a speech by Hon. M. P. Isenberg. Both speakers had good audiences, the places of business generally remaining closed to enable all to attend. The Republican club there is in a most flourishing condition. They have established headquarters in a large hall, and it is plentifully supplied with the best literature. A careful poll of the place was made some days ago, resulting in a vote of fifty-six for McKinley and thirty-five for Bryan, with some doubtful. The Republicans are trying to make arrangements for a joint debate between M. P. Isenberg and anyone whom the Populists may choose to put up against him.

Says He Will Get Drunk.

Since the Republicans and all those who desire the election of Wm. McKinley will choose to hear Hon. F. X. Schoonmaker tonight, depriving them of the gratification of their curiosity to hear "Pitchfork" Tillman, we can probably best indicate the tenor of his speech tonight by quoting a portion of his McMinnville speech, made Monday. Senator Tillman said: "I am a temperance man. I only drink when I want to. I have not been drunk since I was 11 years old, but I will tell you now that if Bryan is elected, I am going to get drunk, and all of you want to do the same." His whole line of argument was about as elevating.

A GIRL CARTOONIST.

Miss Viola Kent Exhibits Great Natural Talent as an Artist.

A remarkable cartoon, both in design and execution, has been drawn by a 15-year-old school girl in The Dalles, which shows a comprehension of the political situation and aptitude for sketching amounting to a revelation as to the education and the capabilities of the children who attend our public schools. The picture is a double one, each side revealing points that shows much past study upon American politics and the effect that the different policies of the great parties would have if in operation.

The left half is devoted to the situation if Bryan was elected president. Ships are arriving from foreign countries loaded with manufactured products and raw materials. Bales of American wool are stacked up on the wharves, bearing the significant label "no sale." A hatless newsboy is trying to sell his papers with apparently poor success. An unemployed workman is sitting upon a dry goods box, and a look of hopeless dejection is given his features by the talented young artist. A wretched-looking woman in rags and tatters is leading a hungry-looking child. A cartdriver is urging his dispirited horse along. The cart is empty, so is the horse's stomach. The only thing pleasing about the picture is the look upon Bryan's face, as he stands in the door of the White House, pouring silver dollars into the sack of the silver mine owner in return for the bullion he had taken to the mint. The American flag is furled.

The right half of the picture shows a great contrast. Major McKinley has a contemplative cast of countenance as he looks with evident satisfaction over the whole country. He sees American ships laden with American goods leaving our ports for their trans-Atlantic journey; factories are belching out great clouds of smoke, while the placard appears on the walls, "Workmen wanted." The newsboy has no trouble to sell his papers; well-fed and well-clothed school children are trudging along to school with books under their arm; the horses hold up their heads and work like their drivers, with spirit; everything betokens active life and employment, and the flag over the White House flies in the breeze. The keystones of the two pictures are found in the banners respectively over each, "Free Trade," and "High Tariff."

The cartoon is an able conception and shows the creator, though a girl of 15, to be possessed of much intelligence and a fair general knowledge of American politics. The gifted young lady, who under proper training, will make for herself an enviable reputation and a good competence, is Miss Viola Kent. She has great natural talent, and should receive every encouragement in the pursuit of this art.

Mr. Schoonmaker's Ability.

Mr. Schoonmaker is probably the ablest orator who has addressed us thus far, his information covering a long period of years, having the value of a statistician. Mr. Schoonmaker made his first Oregon speech at Roseburg, of which the reporter says: "He discussed the silver and tariff questions upon new lines, introducing object lessons on both subjects, with convincing arguments so clear that a child might fully understand the fallacy of 16 to 1. The arguments used on the tariff question were calculated to eliminate the idea that the consumer pays the duty, clearly showing that the amount of duty simply lessens the profit of the foreign manufacturer and protects the price of American labor, without increasing the price of the commodities. Mr. Schoonmaker spoke two hours and a half, the audience giving the closest attention from start to finish, with frequent and hearty applause.

A Letter of Interest to Women.

The General Federation of Women's Clubs has an officer in each state, known as the state chairman of correspondence. This officer's duty is to inform herself concerning women's clubs in the state; to interest them, if possible, in the aims and work of the General Federation; to assist in any way she can in forming new clubs; to furnish all clubs, desiring them, with programs of study, copies of constitutions, or any other printed matter issued by the General Federation.

Mrs. C. B. Wade was Oregon's first state chairman, and was reappointed at the biennial meeting of the General Federation at Louisville, Ky., last May. There are three clubs in this state belonging to the General Federation, but the state chairman is interested in all clubs, and would welcome a correspondent from each and every one in the state. She has thus far been able to learn of only about a dozen, and feels sure that there must be many more to hear from.

Many of the states have State Federations, and our own great state should not be the last to organize such a federation.

Women's clubs, wherever they exist, are helpful in furthering the best interests of society. The club woman is the better wife and mother for the broadening influence of her club.

The state chairman earnestly wishes for and cordially invites the co-operation of all the clubs in the state. Without this she can do very little.

All letters should be addressed to Mrs. C. B. Wade, Pendleton, Oregon.
