OUR PROSPERITY.

Because labor has not been in demand during the past three years, we conclude that at no time in the recollection of a majority of voters were we so prosperous as in the dim past, whose burdens have been forgotten, and only the high price of wheat, corn and cotton is remembered.

We appear to have entirely overlooked the fact that in 1873 cities like Seattle, containing 50,000 to 60,000 inhabitants, were small and unimportant villages; Tacoma and Spokane were unthought of; Helena, Billings, Bismarck and many other cities, now having a commercial importance greater than many of the present great cities of the east and middle west, were stage stations or nothing at all; our own Portland was a city of about 15,000 people, without a railroad other than a local one. The Northern Pacific railroad extended less than one fourth the distance from Lake Superior to Puget Sound; the route of the Southern Pacific was a trackless desert; the Central and Union Pacific were barely completed and were without their many connecting lines. The country between Minnesota and the Pacific was mostly a buffalo range, with here and there a stock ranch. No thought had occurred to any one that the waterless deserts of Arizona and New Mexico would ever produce a fig, grape or orange.

But our prosperity demanded the development of this great western country. Railroads were constructed, cities grew up and buildings were constructed in these new western cities which would have been a pride to New York City twenty-five years ago. We put on all the embellishments of eastern cities; we lighted our streets and buildings with electric lights; we propelled our street cars with the most approved electric motors; we paved our streets; we opened our forests and our mines; we improved our farms and added in improvements to the virgin soil billions of dollars. Our Pennoyers, Thompsons, Montgomerys, Corbetts, Ladds, Frenchs and many others made, or largely increased their fortunes. And all this while the blight of the single standard was upon us. Never did a nation develop in wealth so rapidly.

The fact is the coinage laws had nothing to do with our prosperity nor our few years of adversity. Our national resources, our industry, our ingenuity and our perseverance made us what we are. Legislation in the way of restricting competition will do much for us; but laws leading to driving capital away from us can only do us harm.

The tariff has been much neglected in the local discussions of this campaign because the Popocrats do not dare to discuss it and Republicans feel that the people are being grossly misled by the coinage question. The able and clear presentation of the tariff question by Schoonmaker last evening was needed, and will put many on their feet who have been carried away by the mad and, as we believe, most foolish free silver craze. After all, the issue of greatest concern to this country is the protection of our industries.

Spain proposed to dictate to an American captain in the harbor of Havana a few days ago, but unfortunately for Cuba she stopped just before overstepping the bounds of international law. Had she taken one step further the United States would have had the stars and stripes floating all over Cuba within six weeks.

Tillman, like Pennoyer, was a sad disappointment to the more sensible men who have been carried away by free silver. He offers nothing which appeals to reason or sound judgment. He disgusts many who are wavering in their allegiance to Populism, and the inevitable result of such speeches will be to drive men to the standard of McKinley and protection.
