THE REPUBLICAN CAMPAIGN SUCCESSFUL.

The most remarkable campaign in the history of the country since 1860 is drawing rapidly to a close. Seldom has a contest been so entirely free from abuse or vilification of the candidates; but seldom has so many false representations been made. In many instances the statements, no doubt, were supposed to be true, and were innocently made. But in too many cases when the truth was made known the press and the campaigners continued to reiterate them. The Republican press has been kept busy disproving false allegations. The whole campaign as originally laid out by the Popocratic managers was upon a false basis.

The act of 1873 was not surreptitiously passed, and this is now conclusively proven. Ernest Seyd, who is alleged to have been employed by London bankers to distribute 100,000 pounds sterling to demonetize silver in America, was a silver advocate and urged congress, by a written paper to the committee who had the act of 1873 in charge, not to drop the silver dollar from our monetary system. Seyd was not in this country at any time except some five or six years prior to the passage of this act. The Bismarck letter was garbled; Blaine was misquoted; Garfield's relatives were misrepresented; and a hundred other fallacies were put before the people and have been disproved.

Last, but not least, the great foundation stone of Populism, the alleged relation between wheat and silver, was knocked into a cocked hat, to use a slang phrase, by nature herself. Now all our Populist friends have left is the claim that the rich have all the money. This we have never disputed, for it would be indeed queer if the poor had the money. If such were the case the bankers and shrewd business men would all become poor, and the Populist, who devotes his time to discussing the affairs of the nation on street corners instead of repairing his fences and digging potatoes, would be rich. Then indeed it would be a cry of rich against the poor.

The real fact is becoming more and more prominent that the American people cannot be fooled all the time. Wise counsel and a presentation of the truth has had its legitimate effect, and unless there is a great change in popular opinion between now and November 3rd McKinley will be elected by an overwhelming majority. The proposition that The Dalles entertain the people interested in the opening of the locks is certainly one that should appeal to the loyalty of every citizen of Wasco county. The Commercial Club has this matter in hand, and if it is undertaken at all it will be well done. The business men of The Dalles are ever ready to respond to the appeals which are in line with our commercial growth and prosperity. They laid aside all business rivalry and built a line of steamers, whose whistles have been the strongest possible demands for the speedy opening of the river. This boat line has done more to bring to a close the long-drawn-out construction of the locks than any other one influence. They have continued to operate the boats, sometimes in the face of almost insurmountable obstacles. When the improvement or building of new roads has been called to their attention they have always joined hands and contributed liberally. And now that the most important event in our commercial history is about to occur they will not hold back their purses in presenting to that part of the commercial world which is directly interested in the locks at the Cascades our commercial and social standing. The entertainment should be a most hospitable one; but this does not necessarily mean a lavish expenditure of funds. It will take a considerable sum, but not more than the people directly interested will be willing to give.

The greater the majority which Oregon shall give to the Republican ticket on November 3rd the more readily will outside capital be entrusted to the people of our state to develop our resources and establish new industries. No man in this state who owns property within it, or who expects employment here, should be counted with the Popocrats.

The county fair, as a fair, is worth much to our community. As a means for transient gamblers to fleece the community it is a serious curse.
