IT IS ALL DONE.

The election is over, and all that remains is to count the votes and declare the result. It is a good thing for the country that it is over. Business has been unsettled, and 50,000,000 of people for the past two months have had no subject of conversation or matter for thought disconnected from politics. Whatever the result may be, (and we believe there can be but one) the country will be better off than when struggling along in the throes of doubt and the agonies of uncertainty. In a few days the country will settle down to its regular business, and the sound of the campaign speaker will fade as the odor of a cut flower into the vast domain of nothingness. As Oliver Wendall Holmes puts it, "Silence like a poultice comes to heal the blows of sound."

Let's all shake hands and say we are emphatically glad of it.

HARD TO REALIZE.

It seems hardly credible that the day of the opening of the Cascade locks is at last at hand. For twenty-three years hope deferred hath made many a Dalles heart sick, and now that the long nightmare of doubt and uncertainty is ended, it seems impossible to realize it. That it is a work of the utmost importance to Eastern Oregon, and particularly to The Dalles, we all know, yet none of us are prepared to peep into the future and even guess at the results. When the celebration is over; when the toot of whistles that heretofore have awakened the echoes along the lower river, have come ringing back from the basaltic walls that mark the grand old Columbia; when the speeches are over and the parades and the celebration are all things of the past, then we may begin soberly to look about us, and realize that a new era has begun.

Now that the election is over and the locks practically opened, let all Oregon and Washington unite in a determined effort to overcome the obstructions to navigation between this point and Celilo. Some of our exchanges east of us have at different times asserted that The Dalles had no interest in opening the river above here. To refute this taunt we ask the press of Eastern Oregon to

DOLLY MADISON'S TACT.

How She Managed to Win Everybody's Heart. It was the tact and genuine kindness of Dolly Madison that made her one of the most prominent of American women. Several episodes mentioned in Mrs. Goodwin's "Life of Dolly Madison" are significant of this. At one of her levees, her attention was drawn to a rustic visitor, a youth who was evidently suffering all the torments of embarrassment. He had at last ventured to help himself to a cup of coffee, when Mrs. Madison walked up and addressed him. In the surprise of the moment, the lad dropped the saucer and strove to crowd the cup into his pocket. His tactful hostess took no notice of the accident, except to observe that in such a crowd no one could avoid being jostled, and straightway turned the conversation to the boy's family, and ended by sending her regards to his excellent mother, and bidding the servant bring another cup of coffee. On another occasion two old ladies from the country arrived at the white house while the family were still at breakfast. To the surprise of the rural visitors, the woman they had come to see appeared in a stuff dress of dark gray, protected by a large housewifely white apron, and with a linen kerchief pinned about her neck. Her simplicity of manner and attire completely swept away their awe, and before departing one of them found courage to ask: "Perhaps you wouldn't mind if I kissed you—just to tell the folks about!"
